LARGEST CITY CIRCULATION.

RALEIGH, JULY 1, 1893

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

Congress has been called to meet on the 7th of August next.

The president has gone to Buzzard's Bay, Mass. and will be absent about three weeks.

Wm H Moore, editor of the Augusta (Ga) Evening News, dropped dead in his office last night.

A G Drexel, head of the banking houses of Drexel, Morgan & Co, of New York and Philadelphia, is dead.

FETTER'S SOUTHERN MAGAZINE.

Fetter's Southern Magazine, Louisville, Kentucky, for July, contains a fine essay on the "High Water Mark in Literature," which is interesting reading. The author truthfully, yet paradoxically, asserts that "books need to be interpreted to be fully understood by their authors even—a fact corollary to the unconscious workings of genius." She concludes that "the high water mark is reached only when philosophy guides the pen." Morton Cassidy's critique of the late Edwin Booth is opportune, and is in the able author's best style. The magazine is rich in fiction by Helman Wilson, Cynthia Berry and Grace Tyler. The poetry by Madison Cawein, Hugh and Val Starnes, W G Cooper and Lucile Rutland is pleasing. "Po a Portrait," and "Where Silence Reigns," being worthy of special praise. The magazine is beautifully illustrated and is altogether a fitting repository of southern literature.

CONFEDERATE REUNION.

At the Confederate reunion at Birmingham, Ala., this month, an attractive feature will be the "Tableaux of the States," in which each Southern State is to be represented, as the Birmingham Age Herald puts it, by "its most beautiful unmarried young women." The following have been selected for the States named:

Virginia, Miss Lizzie Clarke, of Newport News.

North Carolina, Miss Kate Cantwell, of Wilmington.

Kentucky, Miss Sarah Simrall, of Lexington.

Mississippi, Miss Nellie Fewell, of Meridian.

Florida, Miss Lizzie Pasco, of Monticello.

Tennessee, Miss Meta Orr Jackson, of Nashville.

Arkansas, Miss Lillie McGee, of Van Buren.

The States yet to be represented are Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Texas and South Carolina.

General Cabell, writing from Texas, says he will have the prettiest woman from that State.

General Capers, in South Carolina, is now in correspondence with the fair representative for that State, and General Moorman promises the Louisiana beauty.

A CHAIN GANG REVOLTS.

The chain gang revolted yesterday morning at Lynchburg and refused to work. The mayor ordered, if they refused the second time, that the boss should tie them to horses and then pull them around the city until they would give in. All but one have gone to work, and he was placed in a solitary dungeon.

ODD FELLOW'S COLUMN.

The Odd Fellows excursion to Norfolk on the 10th promises to be a success.

The Fayetteville brethren will escort the Red Springs on the 27th and have a Red (Spring) better day for the order with their Robeson brethren.

The Grand Secretary's office is no more in Raleigh. Do you miss anything?

Signs and grips were made for practical use, not for greenies to play with.

The third Monday in September, 1893, will be Odd Fellows' Day at Chicago.

The size of an Odd Fellows' 3-link pin is not a sure test of standing in the order.

Some one says very truly that the surest way to bring good men into the order is to keep bad men out. Better words in regard to the growth and standing of our order were never written.

If you are inclined to say anything in a brother's absence which may tend to injure his character, remember that you are violating an obligation as well as doing a mean, contemptible and cowardly act.

Persistency is the road to success. The only known exception to this rule in the case of hen sitting on a china egg. This single exception, however, should not deter brethren from wearying not in well doing in lodge work. The cause of Odd Fellowship is worthy of our best efforts.

The Indiana Odd Fellow says we should be Odd Fellows seven days in the week. Our principles should not be left along with our regalia, in the lodge room, but should be carried home. Our wives and daughters should be given the benefit of them. In our daily work they should be kept constantly in mind. A man who is an odd Fellow only on lodge night is a poor stick.

The present compiler of this column will not have the pleasure of filling it again for the information or pleasure of its readers. On Monday next he will leave the city and make his home in the city of Greensboro. In severing his connection with the readers of this column, he does so with a sense of regret, mingled with that of relief. Often it has been somewhat burdensome to originate or find something that would be pleasant or profitable to the fraternity. But when he considers the sundering of ties of fraternal association formed twenty years ago, and others during the intervening time, when the time comes to bid good bye to so many [whom he has had the pleasure of aiding in getting on the habiliments of the order, to those who have been his collaborators in the upbuilding of Odd Fellowship in Raleigh. Those who have so ably and so energetically seconded every move for the strengthening and pressing forward of this grand work perhaps never again to commingle with them in the pleasant duties, ever dear to us all, it is sad-sad in deed. But he turns his eyes toward the new field which has—providentially perhaps—been opened out before him. Perhaps it is wise that he go to this partially unoccupied field. If it be for the "good of the order" then so let it be. "Nothing is of worth that costs nothing." If we sacrifice nothing we cannot appreciate a blessing. So, looking cheerfully and hopefully to the future the compiler hopes that his usefulness in building up the order may be augmented and that he may rejoice, in time to come, over what now seems to be, to say the least, unpleasant.

With these parting words he takes his final leave as compiler of this column, trusting that it may continue to appear in brighter and better form under the guiding hand of those whose ability is far superior, and that the work of the order in this lovely city may prosper as it has never done before. Let our watchword be:

"Lift the standard of the Order, in its glory, grand and high, As a beacon and a shelter! fling it out and let it fly, That to all with tender boldness it may one clear message speak: There is nothing high and noble that Odd Fellows do not seek."

LELAND STANFORD'S DEATH.

In connection with Leland Stanford's death a curious story is published that will be received with delight by that large class of people who believe in omens of one kind or another. While no more superstitious than the ordinary man, Senator Stanford had a strange belief that his life was linked with that of two palm trees planted by his hand in front of his elegant country residence. He bestowed great care on these trees, and they flourished until about six weeks ago, when their leaves began to turn yellow. No one noticed this change until one evening the Senator called the attention of one of his closest friends to the trees and said that he regarded this decay as a bad omen. He said solemnly: "When those trees die my life will end." And so it proved, for when Stanford lay dead last week in the shadow of his palm trees, his friends saw that the last vestige of green upon them had shriveled and withered away.

Men on an average weigh twenty pounds more than women.

Big balls are now being made from steel not from bell metal.

Wolves annually devour Russian domestic animals worth $6,000,000.
