DEATH OF THE 'IMMORTAL J. N.'

J. N. Pree, better known throughout the United States as the "Immortal J. N.," died Monday at his home in Ohio. "J. N.," whose eccentricities which could hardly be classified with insanity, has been known for the past thirty years to nearly every newspaper man from Maine to California and to the public generally as a harmless wanderer who was constantly in search of somebody to help him to "raise the veil and lift the pressure." He was well known in Raleigh.

DIES FROM A DOG BITE.

Asbury Park, July 21.—Lizzie Byram the 19 year old daughter of A. J. Ram, a patent medicine manufacturer of Newark, is dead this morning of hydrophobia, the result of a bite received from a dog last fall. Soon after biting his mistress the dog was shot by some unknown person, but there was no thought of its madness, and the wound did not give Miss Byram any trouble until last Friday.

While sitting on the porch of the Atlanta hotel with a number of guests she was seized with a slight fit of sickness. She was taken to her home by Mathias J. Applegate, the son of the proprietor of the hotel. The two had been engaged since Easter and expected to be married early in September.

Dr. J. H. Byram was not called in until Saturday morning, and even then none around the bedside of the stricken girl believed that her malady was of a fatal nature. Late that afternoon she developed pronounced signs of rabies. Yesterday she was seized with violent spasms, foaming at the mouth and making a noise like the barking of a dog.

Through it all she displayed the most remarkable pluck and courage. She was perfectly conscious for the greater part of the time and pleaded with those in the room not to come near her as she felt she could not resist the impulse to bite them.

In one of her worst paroxysms she turned upon her lover, who was trying to restrain her from doing harm to herself, scratched his face until the blood came. His wounds were promptly cauterized. Just before the last convulsion, in which she died, the poor girl showed unmistakably the character of her affliction.

She would bark like a dog when frenzied and whine when subdued, all the while gnashing her teeth and foaming at the mouth. After a night of this agony she died at 6 o'clock.

Miss Byram was a girl of sweet disposition and a general favorite here. Her parents and her young lover are heartbroken. Late this evening the common council of the city met and passed a resolution ordering the police to shoot all unmuzzled dogs on sight.

People who are not in too much of a hurry to visit Chicago, and who tarry at home awhile until along toward the shank of dog days, will be able to go much cheaper than those who go now. All the indications point to cheap tickets. The round-trip rate from Charlotte may yet reach $23. Wait and see.

At last after much baggling it has been settled that Columbia is to have a dispensary. The movement was opposed by some of the best people of Columbia.

If France and Siam go to war China will help Siam, and Russia will probably aid France.

The Confederate veterans are to have a shooting match on the 4th of August, at LaGrange, N. C., and the first man or woman that "hits the bull's eye" will be appointed postmaster.

Several consignments of Sumatra tobacco have been seized in Philadelphia for undervaluation. The duty paid was 35 cents when it should have been $2 a pound. It is estimated that the losses in Philadelphia by this undervaluation will amount to $1,500,000.

A CORPSE REPLEVINED.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—A few weeks ago Mrs. Mary Jones was admitted to the Woman's Hospital where she died on July 10. Her body was given at once to an undertaker to be embalmed and word sent to Edwin E. Jones, the husband of the dead woman. He refused to pay $10 demanded by the undertaker for embalming and the undertaker refused to surrender the body. Mr. Jones then got out a writ of replevin, in which he valued the body at $100. The undertaker, by entering security for that amount, could have held on to the body, but he waived the privilege and Mrs. Jones was buried. On the first Monday in August the case will come before the court, when it will be determined whether Mr. Jones must pay the undertaker.

BUSINESS PUSH.

A tea store gives away World's Fair souvenir albums as premiums to purchasers.

Silver being reasonably cheap, Nebraska merchants are giving away plated sugar bowls, spoons and things to customers.

When the Elks visited Detroit a local merchant invited them to check their baggage at his store and make their headquarters. Did it pay? Well, rather!

A Woonsocket firm extends the same privilege to country visitors.

A Pittsburg firm will send to the World's Fair each day a man and a woman who guess the nearest to the total number of admissions on that day.

An Ann Arbor (Mich.) firm sends up toy balloons with parachutes bearing tickets entitling the finder to a pound of coffee.

But all these schemes, or any other schemes amount to just nothing at all unless the people know about them. That takes newspaper advertising.

A CHEERY PEOPLE.

Norfolk Ledger.

The South Carolinians are a cheery people, taking gratefully the goods the gods provide, and even seeking among their ills for some grains of comfort that may escape the scrutiny of those less hopeful. An illustration of this latter trait is found in the utterances of Prof. J. S. Newman, of Clemson Agricultural College, in regard to the earthquake of several years ago. The Professor says that since the seismic disturbances the land has been more productive, and that chills and fever, which had been almost a scourge before, are now practically unknown. We are not in a position to dispute these assertions, but it may safely be said that most people would prefer fertilizers and quinine to bring about these results rather than try the earthquake remedy.

Says the New York Press when the judge observed "Why can not you live a useful life?" The prisoner responded "I am doing so, your Honor, I am giving you a chance to illustrate the saying of the Master, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.
