A GEORGIA HEN STORY.

A Washington (Ga) special says: Mr P J Holliday has a pet hen that was enterprising enough to start off a few weeks ago towards raising a family of chickens for the early spring. She was setting in an exposed place and during the snowstorm Mr Holliday had about concluded to stop counting his chickens before they were hatched. However, after the snowstorm Mr Holliday decided that he would go out and give his faithful but frozen hen a decent burial. He sauntered around and at last located the hen by two tail feathers that were sticking up above the snow. Scratching down he thought he saw some signs of life, when suddenly the hen flew up in his face and made him hustle away from there and let her and her little chick alone. They had hatched in the snow.

THE BENEFICIAL FEATURE.
(Concluded)

Now we know there are some brethren who would not black ball his san'anic majesty were he to make application for membership in their lodge. It is from a sentiment that inquires. How would you like to be black balled? and they know it would be very painful to them, and therefore, rather than injure the feelings of a libertine cast their ballot to admit him into their fraternal circle, and he comes in, and when he commits an offence that calls for his prompt expulsion, there will be found those who will plead his cause, and so play upon the sentiment of the brethren that he is given a full pardon, only to again commit acts which bring reproach upon the order; and even when mercy ceases to be a virtue and the lodge must expel, there will be found those who will still vote to retain him, and boldly argue that he is as good as some other member—and possibly he is better than such.

There is yet another class to which we wish to call attention, and that is those who manage to get in an order, nobody knows how, and while everyone admits that they are totally unfit for membership, yet they will never do anything that will justify the preferring of charges. This class like to make a parade of their membership, and whenever there is a public demonstration they will always be found in the front ranks. They make it a point to be present on every funeral occasion, and if there were twenty five lodges of the same order, you would always find them in every procession. We remember on one occasion a procession was being formed, and we were talking with a gentleman and happened to remember that he was a member of the order, and asked him why he didn't join the procession. He simply remarked, "You have noticed the two gentlemen at the head of the procession." We had not, and when we did we were surprised that anyone had fallen in.

Let it be known that there will be a proposition before a lodge to decrease benefits or increase dues, and the hall will be packed and the measure promptly voted down. Let it be known that a brother is in distress, and few will proffer assistance, unless he be a stranger, and then they would move heaven and earth to satisfy his every want. A brother is doubly unfortunate who is unfortunate at home.

AN ODD CITIZEN.

He Doesn't Sleep in a Bed and Won't Eat Hog Meat.

Mt Alry News:

Mesheck Jessup, of Westfield, is a quiet, unassuming, industrious and thrifty man, a good farmer and excellent citizen. While not an educated man, he has traveled a good deal, seen much of the country and observed everything closely. In some things he is what some people would call peculiar. His ideas along certain lines are unique. For instance, he believe it is unwholesome to sleep in a bed, something he has not done since the war. At the beginning of the war he was threatened with something like dyspepsia. The outdoor life of the army agreed with him so much that he came out of the army sound in every particular. Since then he has always slept on the floor with nothing under him but a sheep skin, and without any covering whatever.

In cold weather he keeps a fire burning all night and sleeps close to it, so he does not suffer any from the cold. He neither smokes or chews, nor does he drink any coffee, whiskey, tea, or anything but water. He will not eat hog meat of any kind; says it is too strong and consequently not whole some. He will not eat sugar nor anything that has sugar in it, such as cakes, pies, etc. He is now about 65 years old and says a sounder, healthier man cannot be found anywhere.

Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Oatwaba, O. had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely.
