Some Real People

The capital city of a State can always be relied on to furnish a story now and then. This fall comes from the experience of a man and his country brother—both of whom knew commonly what's what. These men are wanted to rise early and go to their daytime calling, and to the last sleep at the store instead of a chair's back in called late registration. Then a hand reaches out from the comforts of warm couch and says the "bumping of the little hammer against the city bell." A lawyer—has seen this same thing was done, but another hand came to contact with the cold leather of a shoe. There was a loud screech that sounded and even to the neighbors. He who would rise betimes was surprised, believing he touched some animal in the dark just ahead of the dawn.

Flash in diamond rings and studs. Flash in lured necktie flash in varied footwear, flash in hat, and flash in flocked shirt. Flash in show of ribs of good green money rolled in fat-sho bundles—they have come again and every train is bringing more and more of them—the "fakers" of the fairtime. Like a family they are moving about plying their vocations—whatever that is called. One looks upon them and sees faces that are stamped in the memory by scenes and ventures of last year at some fair. They change little. Friendly folk they are, for the most part, and many of them with big and generous hearts. One wonders if the weariness does not come over them sometimes and force them to take up life in the real.

They were talking it all over, they being anybody nameless but with all the thinking and reasoning powers allotted by the Creator. It was up for discussion to settle the measures of keen disappointment when candle light has yielded to the sun flare of next day. How much may a man and woman know about each other simply by telephonic acquaintance? There are all the tone qualities of voice, there are the little tricks of speech that wear personality and have character. A half sigh may be heard, if not a whisper. Imagination then goes on a flight and in the realm between heart and brain the spirit painter piles the mystic brush and plans a face and form; tall or short of stature, willowy or touched with the awkwardness of emponpoint. Such things have happened and either there was disillusionment and the lines faded and disappeared, or there was the climb from the haze of the thought valleys up to the established high lights of the mountains.

If all the wedding talk for Raleigh materializes this winter and in the early part of the spring one begins to wonder where next year's brides will come from. Wouldn't it be a good idea to have matches arranged so that the low country shall marry the people of the hills? Then would be combined qualities that are better than by the intermarriage of those of an immediate section or neighborhood. The mountaineers seek the sea at vacation time and the salt crowd lie themselves to the peaks. Proximity may well do the rest.

It's a great true pity that we are to have no real circus along with the Fair Week crowd. There is such a wonderful delightfulness all about the great belying canvas, and the expectancy of a multitude grouped to watch feats of foolhardiness, and the tinsel that seems brighter and richer than anywhere else in the big, round world, the horses that show more grace and a differing sort of fleetness in their seeming miles on miles around the old-time ring, the snap of the tissue papers in multi-color splendor as the "beautiful show lady" fearlessly does a leap through and through, the growl of the surly lion and his roar from the deep recesses of the animal tent, the slow measured waltz of the unwieldy elephants and the hiss and crack of the ringmaster's whip, the imitation of Greek and Roman chariot days and the possible crash of two or three chariots in collision, where rivalry was imitation and training does away with competition, the cry of the vendor of red lemonade—dear old drink that can't taste the same anywhere else—and the honey-gummed popcorn balls—only digestible at a circus—the gibe of the clown and the imitable antics of the trick mule not to be bought for a king's ransom, and then the fascinating "concert" that nobody will abuse. These things and all the little parts and sideshows, with possibilities of short-changing and now and then the slippery feeling of bad money that the tricksters palm off on you. Biggest and best of all, wakening in the heart that was a child's some time, overpowering in its mysterious influence, the dear, delicious sweetness of the sawdust—sawdust that smells sweeter to old men, even as to the little ones, than incense to temple devotees.

COMMUNICATION FROM W. H. KING DRUG CO.

Offers to Refund Money if Hyomel Does Not Cure Catarrh. To the Editor of the Raleigh Times: We have been asked recently if the advertisements printed in your columns regarding Hyomel were true, where we offer to refund the money if this treatment does not cure catarrh. We wish you would please print this letter in as conspicuous a place as possible in your paper, saying that we absolutely agree to refund the money to any purchaser of a Hyomel outfit if it does not cure catarrh. This outfit consists of an inhaler of a convenient size to be carried in the vest pocket so that the user can breathe Hyomel four or five times daily. With this is included a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomel. The outfit sells for $1.00 and is a most economical treatment, for the inhaler lasts a lifetime and there is enough Hyomel for several weeks' use, while extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents. We trust this letter will settle any doubts that may have arisen as to our willingness to refund the money for a Hyomel outfit, in case the purchaser is not perfectly satisfied. Respectfully yours, W. H. KING DRUG CO.

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR CATARRH.

Just Breathe Hyomel Four Times a Day and Be Cured. Hyomel has performed almost miraculous cures of catarrh, and is today recognized by leading members of the medical profession as the only advertised remedy that can be relied upon to do just what it claims. The complete outfit of Hyomel costs $1.00, and consists of an inhaler, a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomel. Breathe Hyomel through the inhaler for a few minutes four times a day, and it will cure the worst case of catarrh. It soothes and heals the mucous membrane of the air passages, prevents irritation and effects a complete and lasting cure. In Raleigh there are scores of well known people who have been cured of catarrh by Hyomel. If it does not cure you, W. H. King Drug Company will return the money you pay for Hyomel. This is the strongest evidence that can be offered as to their faith in the remedy.
