Going Higher Up.

The arrest of George W. Perkins, formerly vice president of the New York Life Insurance Company, on a charge of grand larceny, does not mean that he will go to prison. Indeed there is no reason to believe that he will be convicted, but the start has been made and the result will unquestionably put such safeguards around the funds of stockholders and policy holders as will prevent the making of contributions to political campaigns in the future. That is what the country desires. Mr. Perkins, of course, is not the only felon in his class, if he is guilty. Hundreds and hundreds of trust companies and corporations contributed to the McKinley and Roosevelt funds, and they did so because they believed it was in the interest of the properties they controlled. They were afraid of Bryanism and the depreciation of the money value with free silver as a live factor. There was none of that issue, however, in 1904, and the insurance companies helped again, being of the opinion that they would suffer less in the event of Mr. Roosevelt's election.

According to Mr. Jerome, Mr. Perkins did not commit grand larceny, but when Justice O'Sullivan said that he had a warrant had to be issued, Justice O'Sullivan, however, will not sit in judgment. It is hard to understand this talk of a jury trial and the propriety of having democrats and republicans serve when it seems clearly to be a question of law. Mr. Perkins has admitted that he turned over a part of the insurance money to the treasurer of the national republican committee. The highest judicial tribunal in the state must say whether the act was grand larceny, as technically charged, and if so, then it must determine the punishment. A jury cannot say whether or not the act was a crime.

However much the public may demand in its desire to have the insurance grafters punished there is such a thing as law, and it must govern all transactions. To the lay mind it might appear that Perkins and the others were guilty morally, and certainly there can be no defense of their conduct, yet it may be necessary to enact new laws before they can be adequately handled by the courts. But it would be unfortunate if they should escape on technicalities. The conviction of Perkins would place an equal share of guilt upon the postmaster general of the United States, who took the money from the insurance companies. Indeed, the president of the United States might be included in the sweeping indictment, because his victory was due in no small part to the money used to corrupt the ballot box. We are certainly "going higher up." Not all of us will believe that Mr. Roosevelt was ignorant of the work of his associates in the campaign for funds and the abundant success which crowned their efforts.

In the end, however, it will be of small concern whether the question of larceny is settled in one way or the other, for there will be few, if any political contributions in future elections, and the evil will have been wiped out. The republican party will not be able to count upon the trust powers as the most formidable asset in the fight for the control of the government, but regardless of political faith or affiliation no decent or patriotic citizen of this country can condone that which has been a national disgrace.

Let Us Have That Club.

While there are many sad and misguided persons have an idea that golf is immoral, and all that sort of thing, it is certainly a game to attract visitors to southern cities during the winter months, and the tourists stop in the towns where the links are green. The establishment, or creation, or formation of a country club in Raleigh would be an institution well worth the price. It would not only be a source of everlasting comfort and pleasure to the home people the year round, but it would be a fine drawing card, and it would induce many of the travelers to tarry here in the winter and the spring. We have ample hotel accommodations, not as elegant, perhaps, as the palaces at Palm Beach, but accommodations which will answer all requirements. Raleigh, moreover, is noted for its delightful people and its delightful homes, but a club is needed to tempt the visitors to remain once they have arrived, and coming once they will come again. Already there is a committee at work on the project and good men have the matter in charge. With the proper encouragement and support from the citizens there will be no difficulty in making the thing a success. Nobody in this town is trying to bring the tourists here to hang them up by the heels until all of their money rolls upon the floor, and many will be anxious to come because they know that the mercenary spirit is not in our creed. Above all things, however, we must not frighten the merry crowds away by making them believe that they may stumble into a hell hole while walking to the links.

In its unjust attack on the Philadelphia Public Ledger, Collier's Weekly seemingly has little regard for the truth, for it undertakes to say that nothing appears in that newspaper which is calculated to offend John Wanamaker, the inference being that its editorial opinions are controlled by the Wanamaker advertisement. It happens, however, that the merchant prince does not advertise in the Ledger, but that did not keep Mr. Hargood from assailing it. Hargood also charged that August Belmont helped to dictate the policy. "Mr. Belmont," says the Ledger, "has no more connection with, or influence over, or knowledge of, this paper, than has Mr. Hargood or the emperor of China, or the man in the moon, and any suggestion that he has, is a reckless, gratuitous, imbecile lie." Verily, that is a fighting word, but it fits the case.

Newspaper life must be one long, sweet dream in Asheville. Nothing but there shatters the slave of the quill, but he takes life as it comes and never worries and never frets. While some of us timidly serve the public without seeking glory, while others sit in the sanctum at night and tear their hair wildly while trying to save the state and the people from the dems of iniquity, the Asheville man lolls in a hammock and dictates to a little girl with golden tresses about "The House of Mirth." It must indeed be the ideal way of living, without cares, and sighing not if the state is lost. How easy it is to write of Lily Hart and Mr. Rosedale. It doesn't matter to him whether the choral was taken by accident or with intent; it is the same to the people of that town, who never think of serious things, since Olsen's glory was dimmed.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie, who is giving his views on the railroad rate question, says he does not think present rates are too high. He says they are irregular. "I think," he says, "that railroad companies should be required to publish full lists of their rates and that copies of these should be obtainable by every shipper, just as passenger rates are published." Strange the senate had not thought of this before.

And now the Mutual Life Insurance Company has charged McCurdy with having entered into "a fraudulent and corrupt conspiracy" with his son-in-law, Thebaud and Col. Raymond for the purpose of enriching the partnership of Raymond & Co. That settles it; his jig is up. He might have survived everything else, but a charge of conspiracy—never.

It is reported that Speaker Cannon has buried the ship subsidy bill in the committee, that it is not to see the light of day in the house. Is the administration going to add this to the price of that rate bill? It would seem that tariff revision and some other things on the side were enough to pay for it. Old Uncle Joe didn't want the subsidy bill and he drives a good bargain.

The disinherited son of a western millionaire is at Monte Carlo trying to break the bank. It is much easier to break the will.

The Norfolk Landmark seems to think that spring has it in for the poets.

If Mr. Perkins becomes the insurance scapegoat he will be of the purple type.

The Chadwick Revival.

From the beginning the Union Evangelical meetings at Raleigh, which began early last week and will last until Thursday, have been largely attended. They were widely advertised. Three Methodist churches, two Baptist (Tabernacle and Fayetteville Street) and the Presbyterian church united in the same with Dr. Chadwick and in the afternoons delivered the addresses which some of our readers heard from him at Jackson Springs, and others have read in one of his books. So far (Sunday) the meetings have been devoted to Christ-ianity and the doctrine of Keswick and Northfield has been insisted upon. That is, the special and sudden coming of the Holy Spirit, immediate cleansing, and the endowment with power have been the general themes. If we understand, Dr. Chadwick preaches immediate holiness, and blameless, though not faultless sanctification. The meetings began in the Methodist church; then went to the Presbyterian. This week they are divided each day between the Methodist (Central) and the Baptist Tabernacle. In this way many people are reached. Mr. Chadwick is an unusually impressive preacher. Whether in prayer or speech he is master of the power of deliberation and the pause. He has a remarkably effective voice, low but penetrating and remarkably governed. He impresses one as deeply in earnest and yet thoroughly self-restrained. We heard him on Sunday afternoon in a sermon that seemed in thoughtfulness and literary setting the work of a lifetime. Every sentence went home. Men could neither evade nor forget that message. There were, with all the solemnity of eternal life and death, a number of fine shafts of humor. We may say in passing that unless the reports in our morning paper are read with the understanding, one is likely to get rather an unusual impression of the meeting. There has been nothing "wonderful" about it, although there has been very good interest. The Raleigh First Baptist church declined to join in these meetings on account of the tenor of their teachings.—Biblical Recorder.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY.

Representative Brownlow, of Tennessee, stood in the house lobby with his hand on the shoulder of a young member from Ohio. Representative Wichter, of Baltimore, came along. "Hey," said Wichter to the Ohioan, "look out for that man Brownlow, or he'll get your watch."

"What do you mean?" asked the Ohio member in alarm.

"Just what I said," insisted Wichter. "Brownlow is the greatest confidence man in this congress. Look out for him. I come from a city district and have not much use for seeds, so I made an arrangement with Brownlow last year to trade him my 4,000 packages of seeds for something that would be useful to me. It was a complete reciprocity agreement. He got my seed, and when I went around to him to get my plunder all he gave me was two copies of a report of the department of agriculture two years old. You look out for him, or he'll get your watch."

"I don't agree with all these attacks on the senate," said Representative J. Adam Bede. "I think the senate matches up pretty well with any senate we have ever had. You know the constitution intended the senate should be the brithcing on the legislative harness, and that's what it is, the brithcing."

The house of representatives spent an hour and a quarter this afternoon discussing a point of order raised by Representative Hardwick of Georgia. The point was made against the proposition in the legislative, judicial and executive appropriation bill to increase the salary of a coal weigher from $720 to $820 a year. The discussion was constitutional in its scope. It resulted in defeating the increase. The coal weigher will not get his $100 raise, which is a great saving for the government, but the time used by the house in discussing and defeating the $100 increase cost the government more than $1,000. That is a fine example of the economy practised by the house.

THE EASY OIL.

Scott's Emulsion is "the easy oil"—easy to take, easy in action. Its use insures deliverance from the gripping and nauseating sensation peculiar to the raw oil. Nobody who has any regard for the stomach thinks of taking cod liver oil in the old way when Scott's Emulsion is to be had. It is equally certain that no one whose health is properly regarded will accept a cheap emulsion or alcoholic substitute for Scott's Emulsion. It fulfills every mission of cod liver oil and more.

GRATEFUL FOR HIS FREEDOM

Victim of Drink Tells How He Was Cured at Keeley Institute.

When I went to your Institute I was a confirmed drunkard, whereas I now am a perfectly sober man, and have been ever since I left your Institute in 1900. I feel very grateful to the managers of the Keeley Institute for what they have done for me in curing me of the drink habit, which was dragging me and my family down to woe and misery. They are now happy with me at home, and I wish every man who drinks would go to your Institute for treatment, for I know that he would be cured as I was. The men of the Keeley Institute were so kind to me that I can recommend them to any man who will go and be cured. No treatment could be better than what you got there. I consider it a blessing to any man to be able to go to the Greensboro Keeley Institute where he may be freed from the power of alcohol and made a new man. God's richest blessings upon the Keeley Institute. ALLEN GRIMSLEY, Farmville, N. C., Dec. 6, 1904. If you have friends who might be benefited by this treatment send their names to the Keeley Institute, Greensboro, N. C.

Elkins today until they reminded him how he kept New Mexico out of the union thirty years ago. Elkins was formerly a delegate in congress from New Mexico. Once he had the bill making New Mexico a state in such shape that it was ready to be called from the table and passed. Senator Burrows of Michigan, then in the house, made a sensational speech against the bill. Elkins was not in the chamber. As he came in somebody told him that Burrows had made a great statehood speech. Elkins rushed down the aisle, shook hands with Burrows and warmly congratulated him. He thought Burrows had spoke for instead of against him. The democrats who were going to vote for the bill saw Elkins effusively tell Burrows that he had made a great speech and concluded that if Elkins, who was father of the bill, felt that way toward a man who opposed the bill they could not afford to vote for it, and they didn't. The result was that the bill was beaten and New Mexico isn't in yet.—New York World.

IT IS A PARASITE.

That Causes Itching Scalp, Dandruff, and Finally, Falling Hair. The itching scalp, the falling hair and the dandruff that annoys are the work of a parasite hidden in the scalp. That parasite must be killed to cure dandruff; and the only preparation that will do that is Newbro's Herpicide. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect."

C. H. Reed, of Victor, Idaho, says: "Myself and wife had dandruff and falling hair several years. Two bottles of Newbro's Herpicide completely cured us, after several other preparations had failed to do good." Makes hair grow glossy and soft as silk. Hundreds of other testimonials just as strong. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.
