

BOOK THAT WILL PLEASE NORTH CAROLINA MASONS.

Editor Evening Times: Macaulay in his famous essay has said that "History was philosophy teaching by example." Unfortunately what philosophy gains by soundness and depth, the examples lose by evidences of character! This, however, cannot be said of the little book that has lately come from the press, bearing the modest title of "Beginnings of Freemasonry in North Carolina and Tennessee." Its author, Marshall Delancey Haywood, has won for himself a name for accuracy of detail that is of itself sufficient guarantee for the facts, gleaned from the few and poor records of the order at his disposal. It has ever been to us a subject of strange and unmixt astonishment that an order coexistent with civilization itself, should have preserved so few and carelessly kept records of its rich and varied history. Numbering in its ranks the brightest intellects of all the learned professions—men whose best thought and effort was freely given to its teachings, it stands alone—simply a monument of charity and well doing. We find in the pages of the book before us that in the colonial and state history of the order names of historical interest, that played a part in the great events of the times. No period of our state's history is unrepresented in the order. Nor is this strange. The true Mason realizes at all times that he stands in his community for law and order, morality and virtue. That to him is committed the Almighty power of example. The book is filled with the names of men who have left records elsewhere of earnest efforts to live up to the principles of the order. Of these the familiar name of Cornelius Harriet occurs, and is sufficient guarantee to every student of the state's history, of the high class of men, who composed the order. The historian, Francis Xavier Martin, himself a member of the Masons' fraternity, and many names of other eminent Masons, to whom was committed the fortunes of the state from earliest colonial days appear; and prove that then, as now, in our own day, that the welfare of North Carolina has always been committed to men who could count some one or more among their associates who were members of the fraternity.

Of the sixteen thousand Masons in the state, there are few, if any, who will not welcome this little book as a genuine contribution to Masonic literature. Never before, that we are aware of, has a work been undertaken of this scope, and we cannot too urgently recommend its acquisition upon every lover of Masonry. We have read it with profound interest, and gladly regard it as a standard authority.

GLENWOOD DAMAGES.

Settled on Basis of Award of $25,300 Allowed by Commissioners.

It is understood that a settlement has been reached in the matter of the damages for right of way of the Raleigh & Pamlico Sound Railway through the property of the Glenwood Land Company.

Officers of both companies state that the matter is settled, but the consideration is not mentioned. The agreement, however, is known to be on the basis of the award made by the commissioners who heard the testimony some time ago, Messrs. Briggs, Ferrall and Maynard, and decided that the railroad was due the land company $25,295.54.

In other words, it appears that the Glenwood Company has agreed to accept that amount and the railroad to pay it. Both sides have withdrawn their appeals and agree to let the award stand.

The Glenwood Land Company yesterday paid a 25 cent cash dividend to its stockholders.
