fices of the company for the first vice president, Mr. Meldrum, and was told that Mr. Meldrum had resigned. "Who is his successor, then?" the visitor inquired

"None yet." "Chairman of the executive committee about?"

"In Europe. Don't know when he'll be back."

One member of the executive committee inquired for was reported "in Europe; address unknown." Then another member of the executive committee was inquired for and he also was reported to be in Europe.

"Where can I find the general counsel of the company?"

"Off on a vacation. "Then, can I see the general advisory ounsel?"

"He is on the other side of the ocean." "Maybe I can do business with the genral manager?"

"There is none. One we had resigned and his successor hasn't been appointed yet.'

"Then, have you got a treasurer?" "He has resigned, and we have no successor to him."

"Secretary accessible?" "Off on vacation; expected back next month.

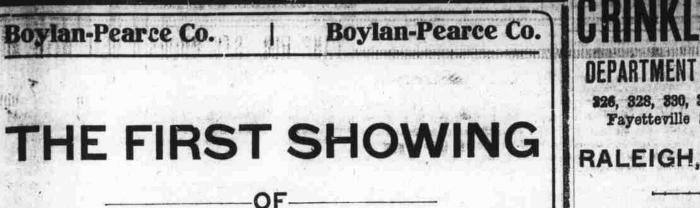

Then a question was asked about the president. He, it appears, is rarely at the Seaboard headquarters in New York and hardly ever at Portsmouth, but usually is to be found somewhere in New York city or at Bar Harbor. He was further told that the second vice president was connected with the traffic department and had nothing whatever to do with the operation of the property. Further inquiry for Mr. Pope, assistant geenral freight aent, who usually used to know something, elicited the information that he had resigned from the Seaboard and accepted a position as traffic manager of another road. These conditions have become a kind of quiet joke among the railroad men mathematical regularity like great something like five rows of fence posts. board comes about as near the happy state of running itself without a head as any railroad system in history except that famous one of the old story in which the same man was president, chief manager, passenger agent, auditing department, treasurer, locomotive engineer, conductor and brakeman .-Richmond News Leader.

BOZEMAN CITY OF FLOWERS.

Carnival of Sweetness Spurs Moatana Town Toward Improvement. Bozeman, Mont., has established her title to be called the flower city of the northwest by the striking success of her sweet-pea carnival. Millions of blossoms were used in the parade, when 125 floral carriages and floats passed over the streets.

Weeks of the most painstaking handiwork went into the preparation of many of the carriages. Visitors from other towns and states pronounced the parade, in variety, taste and beauty, the equal of any flower carnival in the country.

The population of the city was doubled for the day. A big special No. 5, first class, southbound leaves train brought the visitors from the city. Festivals and entertainments continued until a late hour. The Woodman of the World drill team from Butte won the prize over the one from Anaconda. method of inducing the property owners to beautify the city. The result has been a transformation quite beyond all hopes. Flowers grow here as in few places in the northwest and every house has its garden. The spirit of the affair was so general as to induce even the Chinese to decorate their places of business. They sent away for tapestries, and some were used that were worth hundreds of dollars.
