The Revenue Laws are Getting Very Strict

Took Plat of Cider Sold by Wake Merchant to Have Effect of "Short" of Whisker—J. T. wards Had Been Up Before Same Offense and Got Off.

Mr. J. T. Edwards was tried in the ederal court today for retailing, but he came out more fortunate than street below." some of his Johnston county brethren who were in the federal court yesterday for a similar offense. He, as the Johnston county crowd had been selling peach and blackberry cider which, when analyzed, was found to contain B.37 per cent of alcohol, making it a violation of the revenue less.

revenue law. It was shown that Mr. Edwards was indicted a year ago for a some what similar offense, although the district attorney contended that in the former bill the defendant was charged with only retailing spirituous liquors and in this bill were two counts, retailing spiritueus liquors and also malt and vinous liquors Attorneys for Edwards cited that he was tried for practically the same ffense a year ago as all of the wit ses swore that their testimony was the same at the former trial. Both indictments were under sec-tion 3242 of the revised statute. Judge Purnell, after looking up the cord of the previous trial, at which ime Edwards was found not guilty. nstructed the jury to return a ver dict of not guilty.

The cider did not appear to have been very strong, as one witness tes-tified that it took about a pint to have an effect similar to a "short" of whiskey. Other witnesses testifled that if it had any stimulating Mect it was very little. The cider as sold at 15 cents per pint or 25 cents per quart. Mr. W. H. Yarborough, of Franklinton, was Mr. Edwards' attorney. A negro from Henderson by the name of Jim Drake was convicted of removing a check from a letter and him. It seems that Drake went to the office one day last summer and called for his mail, the postmaster having handed him a letter addressed to J. B. Drake, which is his name. Upon opening the letter it was found to contain a check from a Richmond firm and also another check. The letter enclosed was not signed. He soon afterwards went to a local bank his veracity is generally commented and got the check, which was for on and developments are anxiously returned to Richmond the firm sent it back, saying that the signature was not that of J. B. Drake. The cashier began to investigate and the negro admitted having got the letter, and refunded the money. After this he made conflicting statements in regard to who sent the money to him He was sontenced to one year in abided by it.
