An Unhappy Home. While Mrs. Gibson had planned to plead for her freedom merely on grounds of extreme and repeated cruelty, he insisted that unless the financial settlement which he deemed proper should be forthcoming, he would contest the charges, and then go into court with counter allegations of a startling character. But, apparently, he secured all he wanted. For more than a year the inner circle of the Lakeshore Drive and Lake Forest younger set have guarded a series of incidents which link the difficulties of the Gibsons with a brief but tempestuous domestic misunderstanding between Joseph Medill Patterson, son of R. A Rumored Incident.

Until the Washington birthday gathering seventeen months ago becan at Ravinia Park and continued the Moraine Hotel, the Gibson and Patterson pairs had been intimate and congenial friends. Their residences in Elm street and their country places in Lake Forest had been close together.

During the dinner and subsequent gayety Mrs. Patterson, then a bride of a year, joined little in the merriment of her friends, because of her physical condition, which was at-
