FITZHUGH LEE DAY.

The friends of Governor Fitzhugh Lee throughout the South are greatly interested in "Lee Day," at the Jamestown Exposition, which has been fixed for next Tuesday.

The Times hopes many North Carolinians will be there. The following particulars of the day and its purpose are taken from an editorial in the Richmond News Leader:

"Everybody in Virginia knew and loved General Fitzhugh Lee and everybody loves and honors his name and memory. He did valuable service for the state and for the country in war and in peace, added much to the glory of the old Commonwealth. His record was one of the most remarkable in history. His qualities as soldier and statesman, his character, courage and ability won for him so much of the confidence of political opponents and former foes that appointed by a democratic president, he was retained by a republican administration to represent the country at the most important point in the world to us and at a vital time; and was called to high military command under the flag against which he had fought stubbornly and skillfully four years. In both situations, in all situations, he acquitted himself with honor and won the plaudits of the people of all sections and parties. His last days were spent in unselfish labor in behalf of a great enterprise for his state.

"The Jamestown Exposition authorities have set aside next Tuesday, the 26th, to be observed in his honor. It will be "Fitzhugh Lee Day." It ought to draw the greatest throng of Virginians that the exposition has seen. The railroads have made very cheap rates and the cost of going and coming will be so small that the poorest of us may afford it. It will offer an opportunity to honor the memory of a splendid man in a very simple but distinct way. We hope most earnestly that Richmond, especially, will go down almost unanimously. General Lee spent much of his life here and was closely identified with city and people. He loved them and they loved him.

"The railroads will provide accommodation for any number of people who may desire to go. There will be no trouble about that. It will be remembered that Richmond day was spoiled in a measure by foolish predictions of overcrowding and discomfort on the trains. Consequently the attendance was small comparatively and many empty cars were left standing in the stations or on side tracks. Let us have no repetition of this nonsense. The railroads have plenty of cars and locomotives and will be able to carry comfortably all who may wish to go; and certainly all of us should wish to go."

UNCLE REMUS FOR CHRISTMAS. The Christmas number of Uncle Remus' Magazine, which is always good, is especially attractive. Of the December number and the improvements made in the magazine the Atlanta Constitution says:

"With skillful charm it blends the yuletide genius of the old and the new south. The Christmas of plantation days and the Christmas of the south today is compassed within its covers. The cover design is by Alice Beach Winter and illustrates a delightful quaint holiday story by Reina Melcher—'The Washing Well.' 'Mr. Harris' leading editorial is on 'Santa Claus and the Fairies.' It is as delicate, as fantastic a piece of work as the chief citizen of the Snapbean Farm has done in many a day. Mr. Harris upholds the faith of the child in the beautiful Santa Claus legend, deploring the all too prevalent materialism that seeks to deprive it of its legitimate inheritance of the innocent illusions of youth. And he asks, pertinently, what are more tangible than fairies and Santa Claus in this world of shifting scenes and constant change?"

He also makes Mr. Billy Sanders, the "Sage of Shady Dale," discuss an ideal legislature. It is not difficult to see that Mr. Sanders does not approve entirely of the recent actions of the Georgia body of these 'entitled ones,' and that he thinks it leaned too far toward paternalism. He handles homespun satire with as sure a hand as that of Philosopher Dooley in Irish dialect.

Other fiction is by Ralph D. Paine, Mrs. Jacques Putrelle, Joel Chandler Harris. The verse is by William Hamilton Hayne, Joel Chandler Harris, Robert Haygood McConnell, Emery Ertle, Frank L. Stanton, Robert Lovemar and Don Marquis. The illustrations which are striking and effective, are by Will Crawford, E. J. Dean and Robert Edwards, in addition to many photographs and sketches.

"Mrs. Thaddeus Horton contributes an interesting article on 'Charleston and Early American Art.' Miss S. T. Dalsheimer reviews graphically the Christmas work of the 'Volunteers of America.' Literary criticisms are by Mrs. Lundy Harris, whose pungent style and incisive thought are familiar to 'Uncle Remus' readers, and by William Cole Jones, one of the brightest of the younger writers of the south. Mrs. Harris' review of the fiction of the year is admirable from the standpoint of the qualified critic expressed in breezy, crisp English. The theatrical department and 'The Open House' conducted by Mary E. Bryan, carry their usual timely interest.

"The magazine enters upon its second half-year with the current issue. The splendid record of improvement it has made from issue to issue is a flattering omen of what it will achieve as the literary representative of the south during the impending six months."

MIXING THE GOVERNORS UP. The following is taken from the Montgomery Advertiser, of Nov. 20th: "How they do mix things. Even the usually correct Harford Courant says:

"The beginning of the special session at Montgomery found President Milton H. Smith of the Louisville and Nashville in town. Governor Hoke Smith told the legislature that if the other Smith was there to swear them from the path of duty it was an insult to their manhood."

"We thought that to the uttermost corners of the earth it was known that H. B. Comer was the Governor of Alabama. He discovered that railroad baiting was popular and mounted the hobby before the Georgia Governor did, but the latter seems to have eclipsed him in the matter of fame. This is very sad."

But you cannot lose our Tarheel governor in any such way. According to the record, "write on the tablets of our memory," Governor Glenn has a prior claim on the distinction.

THEY GET THE BEST. The Raleigh Christian Advocate says: "The Raleigh Evening Times, one of the newest and best dailies in the State, gave unusually full and interesting reports of the sessions of the Western North Carolina Conference. We are glad to know that our Conference will be reported for the Raleigh Evening Times and the Charlotte Observer by Miss Mamie Bays, whose knowledge of Methodist affairs, ability as a writer, and genius for catching and presenting striking details make her a unique conference reporter."

The Evening Times numbers many good Methodists among its readers, doctor, and we are anxious to do everything we can to contribute to their pleasure. We are handsomely repaid, and with interest, with such evidence of appreciation as the above.

The reports of the Western North Carolina Conference were reported for the Evening Times by Mr. C. W. Hunt, who will also report the North Carolina Conference for this paper next month.

Nobody should envy Concord and Calarrus county. The citizens of that section worked hard for the training school and deserved to get it.

The Atlanta Constitution paragrapher suggests that the paper trust deserves the credit for the shortness of Governor Hughes' Thanksgiving proclamation, which could have been written on the back of an envelope.

It is the conventional thing to say that there is always matter for Thanksgiving times, since, if for nothing else, we can return thanks that things are no worse. But this time we can give thanks that things are very much better.

Winter Housekeeping Dry Goods.

Carpets, Rugs, Art Squares, Portieres, Couch Covers, Table Covers, Lace Curtains, Blankets, Eider Down Quits, Hygienic Down Quilts, Pure White Cotton Down Quilts, Marseilles Bed Spreads, Crochet Bed Spreads.

This Great November Offering of all kinds of Housekeeping Dry Goods is unprecedented. We use this term conservatively and advisedly, because we have never, and we know no other store ever has offered such values, especially at this season of the year.

Now we tell you just how we are able to make these extraordinary statements. We have been preparing for this November Housekeeping Dry Goods Sale for many months and have taken advantage of every under-price offering, and especially during the past few weeks we have secured remarkable bargains in many lines and these we turn over to our patrons at the closest margin.

The wonderful success of this Great November sale evidently shows that a great many housekeepers are appreciating the great and saving advantages this great November sale offers. We sell better goods, better suited to our customers' wants and our prices are lower. You will always find our prices invariably lower and our goods of a better grade.
