

THE GOVERNOR AT CENTRAL CHURCH

Rather Small But Enthusiastic Audience Present

AN ADDRESS OF POWER

Cause of Prohibition Helped Forward by Governor Glenn, Who Handled Question Fearlessly and Aably—His Idea of Reformatories.

The cause of prohibition was given yet another push forward last night, when Governor Glenn addressed a small, though enthusiastic, audience in Central Methodist church. The speaker, who was introduced by Mr. N. B. Broughton, plunged right into his subject, and handled it fearlessly and ably. For an hour or longer he held the interest of his hearers and was frequently cheered.

If there is a man in this audience, said the governor, who is going to vote for the dispensary, let him stand up. There was no such man there. The governor offered to argue the question with such a man, and whichever was convinced, both to go hand in hand and battle for the right. Governor Glenn found no one who was willing to stand up and give good reasons why the dispensary should be retained.

The speaker replied to those who are favoring the dispensary on the ground that it reduces taxes. He contrasted two calamities—the one of slightly increased taxes; the other of one's own son exposed to the temptations and liable to die a drunkard. "Nothing could be a greater calamity to Raleigh just at this time," is the cry of the opposition, Governor Glenn said. Then he showed what the increase would amount to—about twenty-five cents for the average man and not more than fifty dollars for the big property owner. The appeal for the dispensary, he noted, was not coming from the poor man, but from him who owned the mills and factories. In contrast to the cry raised in Raleigh he used as an example three mill owners of Roanoke Rapids, who knew they were paying ninety per cent of the taxes of that town. Did they cry out? Rather, they were the most active of prohibitionists—knowing that their pocket books would be touched.

Dollars and cents on the one hand; the immortal soul on the other. That seems to be the way the matter stands here. This is a spirit of covetousness. And what will it make a man do? Tell the people that we will have had roads and four months' schools. He cited Mecklenburg, a dry county, whose roads and schools are the best in the state; then in their order Guilford, Durham and Robeson. The roads of Rowan county, which has plenty of whiskey, are not as good as those of these other counties. Is Wake county so poor that it cannot support its schools? He didn't think so.

Eighty per cent of the criminals in the penitentiary and on county roads were sent there on account of whiskey. Just $25,000 is annually spent in Wake county for whiskey. The governor here told of the drain on the men using it, how their homes were made miserable, how wives and children are made to suffer, and how these men are transformed from kind fathers into beasts.

As to the enforcement of laws against blind tigers, the officers will do that. Backed by the sentiment of the people of this city, it won't be a monumental task to heard the tiger. If the officers won't keep them down, he declared, he would as governor appoint special officers who would.

Governor Glenn said he had been a prohibitionist ever since 1881, when he cast his first vote for the cause. He didn't see how a deacon, steward, elder, vestryman or other churchman could be on the side of liquor and call himself a Christian. The dispensary men, he learned, had solicited money to use in the campaign from many sources—even requesting keepers of brothels to contribute. Here he stated his position on the reformatory. He believed in houses of correction, but he believed in eliminating the fountain heads of crime rather than waiting until a boy goes to the devil before trying to rescue him. Save him from the reformatory by taking from him the opportunities of crime, and you will have small need for reformatories.

While the governor was going to Beaufort Saturday he saw four young men returning to their homes from a northern college. They were drinking. They recognized him and he was compelled to sit in the car and listen to those young fellows, getting fuller all the time, speak disrespectfully of himself. They soon became too drunk and forgot to talk of him.

He had been taunted, he said, because he had not campaigned in Winston, his home town. But he had done this. Whenever he was asked he worked as hard as he could. On three occasions he had spoken to the people of his home town on the question of temperance and he is willing to go to that city, contribute both of his money and voice to the cause.

"Next Thursday morning, when you get up," pleaded the governor, "offer up this short prayer: 'Jesus, teach me how I shall cast my vote today.'"

WHEN HER BACK ACHES A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Raleigh women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in a Raleigh woman's words:

Mrs. M. N. Goodwin, on 224 East Martin St., Raleigh, N. C., says: "My back was in an awful condition for a long time. It ached almost constantly and I had sort of a flashing feeling which run down my limbs, almost as if hot water was poured down them. Reading about Doan's Kidney Pills in our local papers I went to the Bobbitt-Wynne Drug Co.'s store and got a box. Since using them my back has not hurt me and I have been better in every way. They certainly were prompt and beneficial in my case."

GATEWOOD SAYS M'KNIGHT DID IT

Two Winston Boys Charged With Murder

WHISKEY AGAIN CAUSE

McKnight, Says His Partner, Was Attempting to Shoot Nearly Everybody—Coroner's Inquest Held Today Over Body of Bennett Swain.

(Special to The Evening Times.) Winston-Salem, N. C., Dec. 24.—Russ Gatewood and Moses McKnight, the two white boys, aged eighteen and fifteen, respectively, who were arrested last night on the charge of killing Bennett Swain, a good citizen, and shooting Dave Holton, an inoffensive colored man, are talking quite freely today.

Gatewood says both were intoxicated; that McKnight shot both the white man and the negro and that he took the Robert rifle away from McKnight, because he was attempting to hold up and shoot nearly every one they met.

The coroner's jury at the inquest this morning decided that Mr. Swain came to his death as the result of a gun shot wound.

The evidence in the possession of the officers is damaging against both Gatewood and McKnight.

JAPS MAKE ANOTHER RAID

(By Leased Wire to The Times.) San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 24.—The steam tender Unimak, which has arrived from Alaska, brings the news that several months ago the Japanese at South End, in Kadik, swooped down suddenly upon the Indian village at that place and looted it of everything of value. Upon several occasions which followed this attack upon the village the Japanese returned to terrify the inhabitants and a report of the outrages was sent to Washington.

In reply it was stated that a United States warship would be immediately dispatched to Alaska. The receipts of this word was all that was needed to put a quietus on the doings of the Japanese, who have disappeared from that section of Alaska.

DAVIDSON TO HELP C. POWERS

(By Leased Wire to The Times.) Georgetown, Ky., Dec. 24.—Considerable excitement has been caused by the arrival here of W. J. Davidson, assistant secretary of state under Caleb Powers, and superintendent of public instruction under Governor Bradley. He will take the stand in defense of Powers.

Davidson was implicated in the Goebel assassination by the testimony of Youtsey and Golden, but he was not indicted with the others. He left Kentucky nearly eight years ago and has been living in a small town near Indianapolis, where he was engaged in the contracting business.

J. L. Hopkins yesterday testified that in a conversation with Youtsey the latter said that he had sent to Cincinnati for some cartridges that would fix Goebel, and that he said he would give $100 to any man who would fire the shot. Youtsey, according to Hopkins, declared that he would do the job himself if he could not secure any one else.

MERCY ASKED FOR SLAYER OF WOMAN

Dayton, O., Dec. 24.—The jury in the case of Layton Hines, the negro ravisher and slayer of Anna Markowitz, who confessed the crime, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree, with recommendation of mercy this morning. The jury was out eleven hours. The recommendation of mercy is received with indignation. The jurors are bitter against the one man who refused to return a verdict that would mean the death penalty for the fiend.

SILVER RELIC FOUND.

About two pounds and a half of silver trimmings of the bridle, saddle and clothing of some Spanish Grandee or Officer or Coronado's Army, was found hidden away in a small, dry cave 'way up among the almost inaccessible rocks on the 200,000 acre ranch belonging to C. W. Post, in Garza county, Texas, about 250 miles west of Ft. Worth.

There are disks of silver about three inches in diameter, and smaller disks, evidently intended for the head piece of a bridle. Then there are various long strips intended to cover the straps of a bridle. Many of these pieces are rudely carved and engraved. Among the relics are a variety of chains attached to large silver earrings; at the end of these chains dangle small silver crosses and crescents.

It will be remembered that in about 1580 Coronado put off north from the City of Mexico with a small army, with the avowed purpose of discovering the mines from which the Aztecs secured the large quantities of gold and silver everywhere in evidence. His journey was continued north and across the Rio Grande, then up through this portion of Texas and clear up onto the Plains of Kansas. The point where these silver relics were uncovered is a wild, rough and most picturesque spot. Imagine a great smooth plain with rich grass-covered land extending as far as the eye can reach! That is the condition of a part of this big ranch itself. Coming from the west one suddenly reaches an immense step-off, averaging about 250 feet deep—great rocks many times perpendicular, and inaccessible. There are places where trails wind down, and one or two places where good roads have been built to get off from this upper plain to the lower plain. Once the lower plain is reached, it in turn extends for many miles to the eastward.

When one reaches the great "step-off" a most beautiful picture lies before him; looking towards the east there is an immense spread of rich, smooth land, and away off, 75 miles, appears the low "Double Mountain," 45 miles, "McKenzie's," about 40 miles, "Flat Top," while close by, about 3 miles, nestles the new, rapidly growing town named after the owner of the ranch. Post City is located in one of the most beautiful spots possible to conceive. It is being rapidly built up, most of the buildings being constructed of a splendid quality of light gray sandstone.

Settlers are coming in and being located on the farms which Mr. Post cut out of the big ranch. He builds for the farmers, houses, out-buildings, puts in an orchard on each farm, and in this way the new settlers are comfortably provided for on the start.

Post City is managed not by a board of aldermen, but by a Board of Commissioners, and all public affairs are under their charge, subject to a restricted control by citizens and the builder of the town. Under this management affairs are conducted in a thrifty, economical manner, and the public utilities better cared for. The Water Works System has already been established, and supplies plenty of soft, sweet water for all purposes. This comes from a part way up the step-off, perhaps 150 feet above the city, and has a natural pressure without the necessity of pumps. Sewers are under construction, streets are well laid out, and each block has its "alley." Later on, when the county gets a little richer, a beautiful stone court house will be erected. At present the county court is held in temporary quarters.

In Post City working men can buy homes on small monthly payments, but each working man must show ability before he can obtain a home on these terms. The shiftless, wandering, ne'er-do-well man does not meet with encouragement. Labor union tyranny is not permitted in Post City. The public sentiment and the power behind the laws seem sufficient to prevent interference with men who wish to work without bowing down or contributing from their earnings to support agitators.

The A. T. & S. Fe Railroad has been surveyed through. There are two or three other railroads projected to and through Post City. The financial stringency will probably delay building for a time.

The first bale of cotton was brought into the new city the day before Thanksgiving, but no gin is in operation here yet. The country hereabouts is almost ideal for cotton, as well as for other crops of the temperate zone. The elevation at Post City is 2226 feet above sea level and the air is dry, sweet and pure. The land is a rich loam, mixed with just a trifle of sand, making it fine for the farmer to plow. It grows cotton, corn, wheat, oats, alfalfa, and the two great and profitable grains for feeding stock; these are known as kafir corn and milo maize. Both grow much like sugar cane, with "bushy" heads. These heads are made up of small kernels about the size of peas. These kernels of grain, are composed largely of starch, and almost identical with the composition of Indian Corn. This will produce all the way from 50 to 100 bushels to the acre, and is wonderful feed for horses, cattle and hogs. This climate is particularly fitted for profitable hog raising, by reason of the altitude, making it free from hog cholera and other diseases. At the same time alfalfa and the kafir corn and milo maize raised on low priced land in large quantities make it possible to fatten hogs at a very low price.

Next summer a cotton gin will be established in Post City, to be followed by an oil mill for extracting the oil from the cotton-seed. A large laundry will be built and other public works, found necessary for the convenience of a community.

The lots, houses and the farms sold on small payments down, and monthly payments extended over a term of years, makes it possible for a man of small means, if industrious, to acquire a home without feeling it.

A special effort is directed toward the completion of the largest general store in West Texas; it is 160 feet square, and is being filled with a vast stock of merchandise of all kinds—groceries, hardware, dry goods, clothing, boots and shoes, and particularly farm machinery. A planing mill is now running, where all kinds of window and door frames, flooring, etc., are manufactured. This will shortly be followed by a large machine shop, and a factory for making wind-mills.

About 1500 wind-mills will be required on the lands. Wells are being drilled as fast as possible, and pure water is plenty. Coal outcrops in some places, and will be mined for. Vast deposits of salt exist in parts of the territory, and splendid building stone is found in great abundance. As soon as the railroads appear, Post City will probably extend its building operations rapidly. It's being built on the best known sanitary and hygienic lines, and under the impetus of ample financial resources, bids fair to be the most desirable residence city in west Texas.

"The man who makes the greatest success," remarked the moralizer, "is the one who begins at the bottom of the ladder and works his way up."

"Oh, I don't know," rejoined the demoralizer. "How about the chap who is trying to escape from a fire?"
