THE WEATHER.
(By Lensed Wire to The Times.)
Washington, Feb. 17.—Forecast for North Carolina for tonight and Tuesday:
Fair tonight and Tuesday; light winds, mostly northeasterly.

Weather Conditions.
The high pressure area over the Rockies and plateau region Saturday has advanced to a position central over Alabama, and extending to the upper Mississippi Valley. In consequence the pressure has risen very decidedly in the Mississippi Valley eastward to the Atlantic Ocean, attended by a decided fall in temperature in the upper Mississippi Valley and all districts east of the Mississippi River. There is now a disturbance central over Colorado which has caused a rise in temperature in the southern portion of the eastern Rocky Mountain slope. During the past 24 hours light precipitation has occurred along the Lakes and at a few stations in the Rocky Mountains.

The indications are for fair weather in this vicinity tonight and Tuesday. The temperature changes will be slight. A. H. THIESSEN, Section Director.
