HEARST NEWS SERVICE

Entered through Raleigh, N. C., postoffice as mail matter of the second class, in accordance with the Act of Congress, March 3, 1879.

THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1908.

Little Joe Brown might not have "much show" against Hoke Smith, but he is getting a lot of free advertising—some of which "Little Joe" probably doesn't crave.

While members of the senate may be superstitious on account of the death within the past year of seven of their comrades, there is no indication that a number of men not in the senate are.

The Augusta Herald must be dry. It says: "According to the Anderson Mall the revenue officers and moonshiners of Greenville county understand each other. The officers capture stills and get their names in the papers and the stilling goes right on." Couldn't our officers and blind-tigers, asks The Herald, work this admirable game also?

The Fayetteville Daily Observer, one of the best papers in the state, suffered from the storm the first of the week. The roofing had not been put on the building before the storm struck it, and the paper was issued under the greatest difficulty Tuesday. The Observer got out only a news edition, but is now coming to its readers in its usual bright style. Our Fayetteville contemporary was struck by a fire several weeks ago. We trust that no more misfortunes will befall it, and that the paper will hereafter have a pleasant existence.

In his message to congress yesterday afternoon President Roosevelt argued that the tariff be given immediate attention. He is desirous that all necessary data be prepared so that the next congress may act intelligently. President Roosevelt may be sincere—and probably is—in his advocacy of a revision, but to most people that part of his message will look like a bid for the support of those republicans and democrats who are tariff reformers at heart. We need hardly expect a republican congress to interfere with the tariff and, while the republicans will probably attempt to make capital out of the message, the fact remains that the democratic party alone is an opponent of oppressive tariffs.

That portion of the president's message which treats of the natural resources of the country will appeal especially to publishers of newspapers. He urges that the tariff on wood pulp, which is used in the manufacture of white paper, be removed in order that the American forests may not be wholly depleted. The newspaper publisher pays about twice as much for paper today as he did several years ago, and this fact is not on account of the scarcity of wood, but on account of the tariff, which permits the paper trust to charge exorbitant prices. Other necessities are controlled by the trusts in a like manner, and it would seem that it is indeed time to do something to relieve the purchaser.

FEEDING BREAD TO THE GUNS. The Columbia State thinks that "nothing could be worse policy, nothing could more certainly and deeply arouse discontent than the present madness of the nation for great navies and vast military establishments. What must be the thoughts of the vast army of the unemployed, when its hungry ranks watch the ceaseless launching of fighting monsters costing ten million dollars apiece and the livelihood of a thousand men to keep each one of them afloat for a twelve-month? What must the 60,000 unemployed of Berlin—a host equal to nearly two corps of the kaiser's army—think of the government that continues to expend millions and millions every year on its army and navy, and all the while boasting that it is at peace and amity with all the world?

"All these and like questions must arise whenever vast expenditure is made by our war-lords in the interests of peace. Whenever a great armada is dispatched around the world it means the wasting of millions of the people's money; whenever the great guns are discharged, it means the waste of thousands of dollars—and at a time when thousands of men can not find employment in large cities, when mills and factories in the north and east are cutting down production, and when many persons are actually in need of food.

In the New York World we find a little poem of P. F. McCarthy entitled 'To a Nine-inch gun,' which aptly teaches part of a lesson we should learn. Here it is:

Whether your shell hits the target or not,
Your cost is five hundred dollars a shot,
You thing of noise and flame and power.

We feed you a hundred barrels of flour
Each time you roar. Your flames is fed
With twenty thousand loaves of bread,
Silence! A million hungry men
Seek bread to fill their mouths again.

"One hundred barrels of flour consumed in every voracious roar of the gun—twenty thousand loaves of bread consumed in its acrid smoke. And yet this is only a nine-inch gun, a small gun as these toys now go. The big twelve-inch minotaur demand a far greater sacrifice. And how many loaves will soon be shot away over the peaceful waters of Magdalena Bay? How many millions of loaves have we fed to the vultures of war in a time of absolute peace in the last few years—in the last few months?

"No reasonable man would object to this expenditure of treasure and of bread were there any necessity for it. But under present conditions the embattled powers are wasting with a spendthrift and a reckless hand the treasure and the opportunities of their people. The temper of the present day is not such as to warrant such extravagance on the part of war-lords and autocrats; and they read ill the signs of the times if they fancy they can persist in such an orgy of militarism."

RACE TRACK GAMBLING.

The determination to eradicate the forms of evil seriously detrimental to society is at present manifesting itself outside of prohibition, strictly speaking. Close on the heels of the anti-race track betting legislation in New York comes the news that the house, urged by Representative Sims, of Tennessee, has passed a bill prohibiting race track gambling in the District of Columbia.

This is not to be wondered at, since evils should not be discriminated against. If the excessive use of alcohol works injury to helpless women and children, causing them sometimes to go ragged, cold and hungry, so also does frequently the race course and studying the "dope sheet" result disastrously to the same class. It is said that

WHAT IS POWER

Nature supplies force. Wind turns the wind-mill. The brook turns the water-wheel. Coal runs the engine and food runs the man. Some things contain little force, some things much.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Nature put the power there. It is a wonderful flesh-producer. This is not only a matter of nourishment but of new vigor and activity in the tissues.

during the agitation of the New York bills letters were received from members of almost every profession and business, setting forth the sad conditions produced by gambling and urging the enactment of remedial legislation. With the repression of the arch an of gambling, we may look for speedy improvement in the social and economic life of a large body of people, especially in the more populous cities.

Would Even G. W. Say "No?"

From the Charlotte Observer: "Suppose," anxiously queries The Montgomery Advertiser, "that Mrs. Washington had asked George if he had ever loved any woman but her; would he have lied to her?" The Washington Herald, with its usual headlong rashness in the presence of puzzles tough enough to make Solomon scratch the royal head thrice before essaying an answer—we have no doubt, by the way, that the thousand-wived gentleman found himself up against this very same proposition on his own account, not once but many a time—asserts that George would. "There is hardly any room for doubt," declares the reckless Herald, "as to Washington's answer in such a crisis. He could not tell a cherry and ugly word—even though the cherry tree episode may have been exploded as proof of that. George did just exactly and precisely what The Advertiser's inquisitor did in a like emergency, or does, or will do, as the case may be: he promptly, soothingly, gallantly, and sonorously answered, 'No.' And even the rankest pessimist must admit that if in this he perjured himself, at least he perjured himself like a gentleman." For our part, we are half-inclined to believe that The Herald has stumbled, though blindly on the right conclusion and that in such an emergency George would, could and should have overcome for once his well-known inability to tell a lie. This problem, however, is so very difficult that a class in ethics should perhaps be formed to discuss it. At any rate, we feel certain that George would have done and doubtless did the right thing—whatever that is.
