One of the greatest successes of the festival held under the auspices of the Raleigh Choral Society last year was the work of the children's chorus of 250 voices. Those who were fortunate enough to hear them were delighted and surprised that such a body of singers could be gotten together in Raleigh. So many young singers growing up insure the permanence of the choral society, for as they become of age they will naturally come into this organization and continue their musical work. The chorus this year has about one hundred additional voices, making a chorus of 350 young singers, the largest ever heard together here. They are now drilling under Miss Nina Green, supervisor of music in the public schools, and will be in fine shape by the time of the festival. One of the most attractive numbers they will give will be the "Anvil Chorus" from the opera of II Trovatore. This they will sing to the accompaniment of the orchestra and several anvils; the hammers swung by real blacksmiths, who have been trained in their parts. All in all, the matter will be one of the most attractive concerts this year.
