HEARST NEWS SERVICE

Entered through Raleigh, N. C., postoffice as mall matter of the second class, in accordance with the Act of Congress, March 3, 1879.

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1908.

King Alfonso seems to be pretty sold with the stork, anyhow.

Mr. Fairbanks will now please tell the simple truth about that cocktail incident.

Probably Kaiser William has found Mrs. Hill's bicycle isn't so very reprehensible, after all.

The New Jersey woman who dreamed she'd die on a given day is still able to eat three square meals a day.

It remains to be seen whether or not a political steam roller can smooth out all the wrinkles on the road to victory.

Now the Queen City won't have another state gathering until the North Carolina dentists congregate there in July.

Nobody has bothered to cable David B. Hill and ask him if he had the customary little ailment while crossing the ocean blue.

The man who wants to know if this day is hot enough for you may safely be put in the class with the man who rocks the boat.

Even if you haven't the money to vacationize the way you'd like to, you can make some sort of a bluff at it by looking over railroad folders. They're free.

A publisher out west is going to get all Mr. Bryan's speeches together and print them in a book. This will be glad tidings of great joy to the paper trust.

That thin Rocky Mountain atmosphere, of course, may keep down the cheering, but it isn't the convention hoop necessarily that makes the majority at the polls.

The Sioux City Journal gets peevis and inquires: "Now what's the use in holding national conventions anyhow? Oh, well, the poor railroads and hotel men need the money, you know."

For all night conventions and long-drawn-out struggles over a party nomination, the ancient state of North Carolina can show most of her sister commonwealths how to go some.

Gov. Guild probably knows by this time that the republicans knew they could carry Puritanical old Massachusetts without putting a Bay State man on the ticket. And so, we presume, does John Hays Hammond.

Old Teddy claims to be smiting the trusts, but young Teddy has been offered a summer job, and possibly a permanent job, with Library Humbug Carnegie's steel trust and maybe he'll accept it. Consistency, thou art a cuckoo!

The New York socialist organ that says Mr. Debs has been "outvoted" but never "defeated" has a right ingenious way of getting around disagreeable truths. By the way, let's all get together and outvote Big Bill and in that way spare the feelings of the big and wholesome man from Ohio.

It occurs to the New Bern Sun that Candidate Taft was off duty at the war department's office from Wednesday to Saturday and didn't have his wages docked for the absence. That's nothing. The party war secretary has lost a good many days from war office routine since this nomination-seeking commenced, at the instigation of President Teddy, something more than a year ago.

TICKETS AND MILEAGE BOOKS.

In a few days now there will be another meeting in Columbia between the representatives of the traveling men and the representatives of the railroads to see what shall be done, if anything, looking toward the abolition of the railroads' irksome rule whereby the man buying a mileage book is not permitted to tender that transportation to the conductor on the train but must hand his book through the ticket agent's window to be exchanged for a ticket good between two given points. At Columbia in the last week of March there was a meeting between the passenger department men and the traveling men at which this ticket-for-mileage business was pretty freely cussed and discussed, and at that time the men of the grip agreed to meet the men of the railroad halfway and give the new rule a fair trial for three months, with the understanding that if, at the end of this stipulated time, it still continued to prove a nuisance, the railroads were to wipe it out.

The protestants have lived up to their agreement and have tried out this very unusual requirement with much less growling and fewer scriptural selections than anybody, themselves included, ever expected would be the case; but the delays and bothers of the ticket-for-mileage rule will never be agreeable to the men whose patronage makes the greater part of the revenue for the passenger department of every railroad. Only one of them, so far as we know, has seen fit to put in a good word for it, and he makes no further argument than to claim there is now and then an unprincipled passenger who will ship his trunk or other luggage by tendering a mileage book to be purchased and then not take the train himself that carries the luggage, thereby beating the road out of that much.

This does not appear, at this moment, any strong reason to believe the roads to be represented at this forthcoming Columbia conference will restore the old way of doing things. Like all railroads, they are set and determined in their ways and disposed to no such pool at everybody that calls in question the practicality of their theories or their rulings. The traveling men's association can't force the passenger department to honor the mileage books on the trains, and the railroad commissioners in South Carolina take the ground that they are without authority to compel restoration of the mileage book as transportation that can be used on a train. The traveling men's organization is a good stickler when it believes its rights are involved, and that the fight will be kept up, without saying. Eventually, perhaps, the railroads will recognize the profitable policy of giving way to public sentiment as it is so clearly and forcibly expressed by the principal division of the passenger department's patrons, but there seems to be little ground for belief that the ticket-for-mileage rule will go out at the end of this three months' probation.

ROCKEFELLER, AUTOBIOGRAPHIC.

John D. Rockefeller is going to write up his life. After years of reclusion and studied rebuff for everybody who tried to get a line on the private side of him, the despised oil king is about to turn on the limelight with his own hand and give the dear public a liberal allotment of information concerning the man whom the eloquent, Bourke Cockran once described as "at once the richest and most detested of all the population." Of course it will be a biased biography, with, no doubt, as much insufferable conceit in it as has disfigured and distorted every other line of the literary productions of Tom Lawson, the man now seeking still further notoriety through his offer to finance the campaign of a democratic presidential aspirant. Mr. Rockefeller, we are tipped off by his publishers, will seek to explain, defend and vindicate the American business man, on a large scale, of the present day and generation. That, of course, gives a pretty fair argy of what may be expected from Mr. Rockefeller when he gets to work in good earnest with the literary den instead of with the check-book pen. He is a very self-centered man and everything that Rockefeller does looks good to Rockefeller because Rockefeller did it; and, while there will undoubtedly be some interesting reminiscences of the business start and business rise of this great, competition-crushing corporationist, it would be folly to expect the pages devoted to exploitation as well as vindication of the Rockefeller methods of climbing up in the business world to make much less than 90 per cent of the whole production. Still, when it comes to a comparison of downright self-consciousness, there is one man alive today who is able to show Mr. Rockefeller, with all his infernal greed and rapacity, the road home. We always will stick to it that Andrew Carnegie, the library hunch, and not John D. Rockefeller, the petroleum and kerosene despot, is the most contemptible specimen of humanity of whom present civilization has any record.

We thought Taft and Foraker would play the hypocrite yet and get together on some kind of a deal out in Ohio. Taft wants to carry his state. Foraker wants to hang hold at that precious senate seat, the last public job that Joseph Brownville Foraker is ever likely to hold. Before dog days strike the Ohio corn land and oil wells the Buckeye folks will see Bill and Joe pulling in double harness just as nice as any modern David and Jonathan.

The cruiser North Carolina will on next Friday be presented with a handsome silver service. The exercises will occur off Beaufort and will be witnessed by hundreds of Tar Heels. Our cruiser, which is the fastest in the navy, has already received a black willie goat as mascot and, manned as she is largely by North Carolinians, the cruiser but needs the service to complete her complement.

Secretary Root is going again to the Hill Muldoon training farm to get in shape for another year's state-manship, and he may be accompanied thither by Candidate Taft. Hope the fighting Bill won't train off too much of the superfluous beef from the great framework of the political Bill. The most interesting thing about Candidate Taft is his avoirdupois.
