DID HE KISS HER?

(Written for The Times)
DID he kiss her? What a question! But your answer draw from this: Just imagine a verandah
Where the rose-vines whisper bliss.
There two lovers sit in silence,
From the sight of tattlers hid.
And she sighs; did he then kiss her?
Well, I rather guess he did.

Did HE kiss her? There were others; Friends and school-mates; girls and boys,
Who, to welcome home the wanderer Made that osculatory noise.
When they're gone and he is near her—
He who's waited, oh, so long;
If I guessed HE bent and kissed her I am sure I'd not guess wrong.

Did he KISS her? They are strolling "Neath the peaceful starlit skies,
Listening to the wild waves sobbing As they slowly fall and rise.
He has asked her; she has answered,
And the world seems full of bliss;
Would it be a sealed betrothal Lacking a betrothal kiss?

Did he kiss HER? You are silly,
Though she's plain, as all may see.
But that never fazes some men,
And it never fazes me.
Now, I'll bet that "HE DID KISS HER."
And I'll stake my Sunday pants That any man will kiss a woman If he gets a half a chance.

MARRIAGE LAST NIGHT.
Miss Bessie Gray Wilkerson Becomes the Bride of Mr. J. W. Parrish.

Last evening at 9 o'clock there was a happy social event solemnized in the Johnson Memorial chapel, when Mr. J. W. Parrish and Miss Bessie Gray Wilkerson were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. S. Stephenson, in the presence of a large number of the friends of the young couple.

Mrs. C. B. Pusey was at the organ and played the wedding march. The decorations were tastefully carried out in ferns and evergreens, forming a large arch, under which the marriage vows were spoken.

The bride entered on the arm of the maid-of-honor, Miss Mary Britt. She was attired in a white gown and carried a bunch of bride's roses and ferns. Mr. E. E. Lee acted as best man.

After the ceremony a delicious luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wilkerson.

Mr. and Mrs. Parrish received the hearty congratulations of all present and many beautiful gifts were received, attesting the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

The bride is an attractive young woman, with a large circle of friends. The groom is a popular young business man of this city.

IN HONOR OF MISS WOOD.
