

Flatulency of Wind On Stomach

As It Is Commonly Named, Means That Decaying Food is Making Gas.

This most serious condition is very prevalent and results most distressingly and fatally oftentimes. The stomach in cases of flatulency is unable to digest the food properly.

These gases distend the stomach in all directions, preventing the contracting muscles from doing their regular duties.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets get at gas food at once, digest it, prevent decay, quickly reduce food to nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold everywhere and used the whole world over by sick stomachs and stomachs that want to eat heartily and yet not get sick.

Morton Calls Up Wilmington Finance Matter

stated he had always voted with the party and would support the governor. He read the bill, which provides for the governor to continue appointing this board in February in each year, instead of March, as now, and provides for the chairman of the board to be elected by a vote of the people.

Mr. Kitchin raised the point of order that the New Hanover gentleman voted in the affirmative and could not so move, but rule 29 so allowed, and he proceeded to enlarge upon the merits of the bill, pleading for reference of the matter to the people.

Senator Pharr offered a resolution of thanks to Hon. Whitehead Klutz, president pro tem of the senate, for his excellent work in presiding over the senate.

Mr. Cox asked some more questions, among them if the gentleman from New Hanover had not fought a local bill for Anson. Mr. Morton explained that he considered it unconstitutional, and plead for a reconsideration on the merits of the bill.

He held that he had the mayor, aldermen, county commissioners, democratic executive committee, all, at his back, and the avalanche of telegrams from

The people.

Mr. Cox of Wake wanted to know why the bill had not come sooner. Mr. Morton explained, Mr. Kitchin produced the law requiring the board to elect a chairman.

Mr. Currie said the people of Wilmington had gone through all kinds of revolutions and were true, and the people were behind this, and the trouble was the governor had refused to consult the representatives, and the legislature could not afford to allow the action proposed by the governor.

Mr. Perry, of Bladen, said he had had little to say, but he thought the member of the house ought to have the privileges asked for—he consulted the office of the governor, seeking light, and thought Mr. Morton ought to have the courtesies he asked.

Mr. Kitchin said he hated to come in this, occupying the position he did. He called attention to Mr. Morton's inconsistencies in other bills, and when he introduced a local option bill the gentleman from Cumberland did not make any eloquent speech on that.

He contended that the bill was unconstitutional in that it did not allow a republican to be elected—that the bill was taking the power away from the governor, and if any man on the board was bad in any way for him to say so, or else hold his peace.

He and Mr. Morton fenced, and Mr. Kitchin produced some letters and telegrams and read and commented upon the difference, some saying the matter had not been an issue in the campaign. He said any such legislation was a reflection upon the governor, for the matter was thoroughly discussed; they had had their day, and it was wrong to bring it up here now.

Mr. Stubbs said he had been taught local self-government and respects to the rights of representatives. He saw no reflection on the governor whom he wanted to be equal to Vance in the success of his administration, but Morton and Empe were answerable to the people, and this request meant the continued political supremacy of these men.

That in a division as this, the representative should be sided with. He plead eloquently and touchingly for the granting of Morton's request. It was a fine effort.

Mr. Kitchin moved to table the motion to reconsider, and a roll-call was demanded and sustained. The vote proceeded and the motion was laid on the table after an hour and a half of hard speaking, by a vote of 29 to 50.

Mr. Young Gets a Deputy.

Mr. Wallace called for a bill coming from the senate to give the insurance commissioner an additional clerk at $1,800. Mr. Grant opposed it, saying the house had turned down a similar bill.

Mr. Dowd spoke for the passage of the bill.

Mr. Doughton also said the department needed help.

Messrs. Perry of Vance, Hayes, Koone, McCrary spoke for the bill. Mr. Wallace called the previous question, and the bill passed second and third reading.

ber 9. "across the muddy chasm," and dissected that for the jury. "You gentlemen remember," said Captain Fitzhugh, "that I asked Colonel Cooper to take the editorial sentence and point out the parts that were offensive and that he refused to do so, saying it was offensive as a whole. Yet that morning he wrote the threat, the note, and there is some mystery about the notes. Where are the originals? only copies here and a copy of a copy; then he saw Ed Craig that night and after he sent the message, 'You or I must die,' he hatches up a pretext to arm himself against Carmack. He tells you, gentlemen of the jury, that Ed Craig reported to him that Carmack was in an ugly, vicious mood.

"Ed Craig says he brought no such information about Carmack and could not have done so, because it would not have been true.

WASHINGTON STILL HAS POOR SERVICE

(By Leased Wire to The Times.) Washington, March 8.—There has been little improvement up to the present time in the tangled telegraph and telephone situation, although a small army of linemen had been busy all day between this city and Baltimore. Messages for Baltimore and points north were being sent by roundabout circuits, and newspaper correspondents and train dispatchers alike were uttering remarks that revealed a perturbing condition of mind.

The Western Union Company, which was the heaviest sufferer by the storm, has a great gang of men at work stringing a new cable between this city and Baltimore along the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad. It is expected that the task will not be completed for several days. In the meantime the company is sending messages through its means of improvised circuits and has removed the "subject to delay" warning from its "send blanks." The Postal Company has as yet obtained no direct connection with Baltimore although its lines were not as seriously damaged as those of the Western Union. It is expected that a connection will be effected by tonight.

Cut in Wages.

(By Leased Wire to The Times.) Phoenixville, Pa., March 8.—The Phoenix Iron Company, one of the biggest of the independent concerns, put into effect today a cut of 10 per cent. in the wages of all employees, about 3,000 men being affected.
