

One Way to Avoid Piles and Appendicitis.

Every incoming patient recites the same story—neglected or improperly treated constipation. The great increase of operations for appendicitis, rectal diseases and womanly displacements, indicates the crying need of a mild but sure treatment for constipation, says a well known hospital matron. Headache, stomach troubles, piles and all the fevers of children can be prevented by using this mild formula whenever any costiveness exists: Get at any well stocked drug store "one ounce aromatic fluid cascara," "once ounce compound essence cardiol," and "two ounces aromatic syrup rhubarb." Mix and adults take from 1/4 to 2 teaspoonfuls after each meal, while children will readily take from five drops to a teaspoonful after each meal, according to age. This treatment will correct the bowels and not drug them. The longer it is used the less need of it except when some heavy meal is consumed, or when one catches cold.

If unable to obtain these ingredients from your regular druggist, you can readily obtain them from the Klug-Crowell Drug Co.

SOCIETY.

FRIENDSHIP AFTER LOVE.
After the fierce mid-summer all ablaze has burned itself to ashes, and expires in the intensity of its own fires. Then come the mellow, mild, St. Martin days. Crowned with the calm of peace, but sad with haze. So after love has led us, till he tires Of his own throes, and torments and desires Comes large eyed friendship; with a restful gaze. He beckons us to follow, and across Cool radiant vales we wander free from care. Is it a touch of frost lies in the air? Why are we haunted with a sense of loss? We do not wish the pain back, or the heat; And yet, and yet, these days are incomplete.

"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS."
The Charm Still Lingers of the Most Delightful Play of the Season. What's the matter with "Polly of the Circus?" Nothing at all. She is the most charming, captivating little actress that has been in Raleigh in many a day. The play was a series of delights from beginning to end and those who missed it missed the best thing of the season.

At both matinee and night performance, Miss Tallafiero as "Polly" called forth such rounds of applause as the Academy seldom sees.

The play itself is a delightful little story that brings the tears with the laugh. It is full of everyday people, the characters of the village gossips being especially true to life. Their narrow mindedness and horror of the "circus rider" created a lot of amusement; the two old deacons, Strong and Ellerson, coming in for many funny situations.

Mandy and Hasty Jones, the two old colored servants, played their parts well.

The circus artists, with their trained dogs and horses; the clowns and circus riders were the real thing.

The whole cast was excellent from the little trained dog that swung onto the deacon's coat, the little children, and all up to the preacher and Polly.

Mr. Earl Ryder, as the Rev. John Douglass, was a big broad-shouldered broad minded preacher, young and attractive, who played the part of Polly's teacher and lover to perfection.

But after all, the real charm of the play was not in the saw dust circus ring, nor in the circus people, the gossips, the old servants nor in the preacher, but in Polly herself. Miss Tallafiero is the most charming actress that has been here in a long time. In Polly with her slang and childish ways, and under all her true loving little heart, and childish innocence, she had a part that suited her exactly.

The play was a triumph in stage setting, a constant change of charming scenes, from the dirty rooms in the parsonage; the beautiful old church covered in red and gold autumn leaves and the russet leaves of the trees to the scenes of the circus; the stir and bustle of getting ready for the performance; the busy old manager, the trained horses and dogs; the circus ring itself with all the charm of a real circus, reaching a climax of beauty in the last tableaux—the vacant circus fold, the blue light of moonlight, the hill in the distance with the circus cars and their twinkling lights winding slowly up the road.

The preacher and Polly watch the train disappear while they murmur "Whether thou goest, I will go, whether thou diest I will die and there will I be buried." The curtain falls, there is a sigh of satisfaction—and the audience hopes it will not be long before Polly and her circus comes this way again.
