

BASE BALL and Other Sports

Winder R. Harris, Sporting Editor.

Sailors Turned the Tables On the Red Birds Yesterday

While Big Levy, the Sailors' giant twirler, and his excellent support were responsible for yesterday's defeat, the lack of team work and good base-running was very noticeable.

The most notable absence of form shown by the Red Birds yesterday, however, was in that of pinch hitting. Oh, but the pinchers would have ruined things. In the fourth inning, the locals could have run enough men across the pan to have double-knocked the game if only the pinch hitter had been there.

Booles, the tall boy, filled the mound for the home team and pitched a brilliant game despite his defeat. He had prolific speed and his saliva ball was working pretty fine, but not so good as it can perform.

But there was another pitcher out there—Levy by name—and he proved to be one of the liveliest pieces of furniture seen in the box here this season.

The game was not as fast as the score would indicate, nor was it as interesting as it should have been.

SPORTING SIDELIGHTS.

Inasmuch as Monday's game was won on the "squeeze play" and yesterday's game could have been tied or won by the same play, the following poem is most appropriate:

The "Squeeze Play." Each lovely tress is fixed with care, Her collar's set with just the poise Of grace it takes to catch the boys.

The maiden to the diamond goes To watch her beau in baseball clothes. The contest fierce is almost o'er And nothing-nothing stands the score.

With two on base at bat he stands, While fans and fannies wring their hands— A trick! 'Tis won! What saved the day? "The 'squeeze play.'"

A hammock and the moon's pale beams— Fit scene for reveries and dreams— Some baseball dope and school-girl gush, The game's re-played and then—a hush.

SENTIMENTAL WATER.

The Old Well in the Capitol Square Gets a Spring Cleaning.

During the last meeting of the legislature The Evening Times printed a poem on the "Old Rusty Bucket That Hangs in the Capitol Well." This is the old well that is kept open as a matter of sentiment so that people who come to the city can go and have a refreshing drink and rest in the shade of the old oaks.

Be that as it may, the half dozen hands who linger on the capitol square waiting for the grass to grow so that they can all line up behind the lawn mower and a fine day's work, got busy and cleaned out the well before the summer excursions begin to pour into the capital city.

Two questions are being asked. What would a man's night shirt be doing in the capitol well? Who has been drinking out of this dear old well? Oh! Sentiment. How many drinks have been taken in thy name?

Dorsey Required to Give Bond

Some Sensational Testimony Developed in the Course of the Trial—The Sorrell Case Settled—Other News.

(Special to The Times)

Durham, May 26—The young man, Chas. B. Dorsey, charged with shooting at Mrs. J. T. Butler, had his trial yesterday morning, and while but few believe him guilty the recorder considered a probable cause and required a bond of $500 for his appearance at the superior court.

Mrs. Butler testified that Dirsey passed her room two or three times that morning, but it developed that her door was open and it was necessary for him to pass that way to his room.

Mr. Butler admitted having trouble with his wife. It was put in as evidence by the state that the young man had sent Mrs. Butler two postal cards while she was in Petersburg and that she sent him one with the tenth commandment on it.

The celebrated Sorrell case is at an end. There was a compromise yesterday by which Sorrell deeded all of his property to W. J. Crabtree, trustee; Mrs. Sorrell also deeded what was in her name to the trustee.

Mr. W. T. Bost, of The Herald, went to Salisbury yesterday to be present at the funeral of an old friend, James A. Hudson, who lived near that city.
