THE DRUM CORPS.

Ah! those ruffling drums, and shrilling life. How they carry us back to the strenuous life we lived in those days, when men's souls were tried; When they marched and fought, and bled and died; The men of those days had only one thought—Their country's honor, and all else was naught. While the invader's presence defiled the land, What man among you could resist the demand To shoulder his rifle, and go to the front, And die, if need be, while bearing the brunt Of the hated foeman's assault on our rights. How often did "Taps" on numberless nights But prelude the "Long Roll" and "to arms, to arms!" Rout you all out with war's dread alarms? And still the ruffling drums and shrilling life Has charms to call us again to the strife; And 'twill always be thus, 'till the last "tap" is sounded; The last roll call been answered; the last rifle grounded. —TAR HEEL.

(Special to The Times) Durham, July 6—Two thousand colored people came here yesterday and left without a drunk or an arrest during the day.

There wasn't a fight, wasn't anything to indicate that anybody was here. The officers say no better behaved set of visitors ever came here and their conduct has been highly praised.

The seventh annual session of the Interdenominational Sunday School and Church Workers will be opened tonight in St. Joseph's colored church, President James H. Young presiding.

The convention will hold four days. It will have some distinguished white speakers as well as colored and will be addressed by Durham ministers. This afternoon there is a meeting of the board of trustees for the colored religious training school and chautauqua, which is to be built here, beginning in November.

Something is expected of this body. There may be taken some action which means a great deal immediately to the institution, which must have a hard time before it is actually at its work.

Miss Epps had been sick a long time and her death was not unexpected. The young lady was quite well known here and had many friends in this place.
