THE CZAR OF RUSSIA GUEST KING VICTOR

Welcomed to Italian Soil With Display Seldom Equaled In Modern Times

IMPORTANT EVENT THE END PEACEFUL

Army Drawn Up to Salute Him and for Miles the Royal Train Passed Between an Unbroken Line of Troops—Fifty Thousand Troops Guard the Ruler of the Russians and Little Chance is Given for a Demonstration Against Him—All Suspects Who Might Have Led in a Demonstration Against the Czar Have Been Arrested—An Important Event.

Racconigi, Italy, Oct. 23—Czar Nicholas, of Russia, arrived here today to the booming of guns and a military display seldom equaled in modern times. On a similar occasion, an army was drawn up to salute him for miles the royal train passed between an unbroken line of troops, fifty thousand men guarded the ruler of the Russians. The meeting of the czar and Italy's king is one of the most important events of its kind that has occurred in years. Its object is to plan to curb Austria in Balkans.

Although there was a touch of similitude about the actual greetings between the czar and King Victor Emmanuel, the two monarchs were surrounded by their courts and the surrounding country resembled the scene before a battle, so thick were the troops.

Little chance was left for a demonstration against the czar. All suspects who might lead in any manifestation had been arrested, and every possible precaution was taken to prevent either a show of disapproval or a more serious attempt. Nevertheless, it could not be denied that there was danger.

The excitement over the execution of Francisco Ferrer at Barcelona, which swept all Europe, has not yet subsided, and the anarchists were excited to utilize the opportunity for demonstration against the czar. At Turin and other points, however, the anarchists adopted a unique plan, of attempting all attempts at manifestation and directing that the radicals be the czar by completely ignoring his presence.

The first stop of the czar's train was at Turin. There he was warmly welcomed by three Italian regiments. The station was filled with troops, who had cleared the surrounding streets for many blocks. The disposal of the Italian authorities was a strong force of Russian met service men and soldiers.

The route from Turin to Racconigi was even more heavily guarded than the first stage of the journey in Italy. Racconigi, however, the chief of the assembly a monster guard had been made. The town was a vast prison. In every house detectives were stationed; every foot of every street was constantly watched. Singers were forbidden to approach the town, and the liberty of the 9,000 inhabitants had been greatly restricted. Scores of automobiles bearing Italian and Italian police and army troops raced through the town and not a single hook in the entire village overlooked.

Early today there arrived the last detachment of troops, which included two regiments of infantry, two of line guards, two of cavalry, one of engineers and one of carabinieri. Among those who are in Racconigi are Prime Minister Giolitti, foreign minister Tittoni and Mayor Nathan Romer. The latter is a socialist, accepted the invitation to come after he had got the consent of fellow socialists in the municipal council of Rome.

The presence of the ministers was necessary by the ratification of Russo-Italian treaty affecting the cities of the two nations in the towns, where they have joined to guard against usurpation on part of Austria. The Serbian army, which resulted in the overthrow of the ministry, adds great interest to his proposed agreement. The czar was greatly fatigued by three day railroad journey from Milan and as soon as was possible rested in the apartments set aside him.

DEMOCRATIC LEADER DIED EARLY TODAY

Patrick H. McCarren After Brave Fight For Life Died This Morning

THE END PEACEFUL

McCarren Was Taken to Hospital Tuesday and Operated on For Appendicitis—His Condition Was Critical From the First, But He Put Up a Brave Fight For Life, and Not Until the End Was Near Did He Give Up—His Mother Sick and Had Not Been Informed of Her Son's Illness—Two Nieces Only Relatives Present at His Death.

(By Leased Wire to The Times) New York, Oct. 23—In a modest little house in Brooklyn a gray-haired little woman lay sick in bed. Continually she asked why her son did not come to her. She did not know that "her boy", Patrick McCarren, state senator and political leader, had died at 1:05 o'clock this morning in St. Catherine's Hospital. For days the little woman had received no word from her son. They told her he was busy, that the majority campaign engrossed him. It was feared that when she learned of her son's death it would kill her.

McCarren died after a brave fight, in which he was kept alive for days only by that same will which brought him political mastery. From the time he went to St. Catherine's Hospital, Brooklyn, last Tuesday, and was operated on for appendicitis, till he was very near to the end, he held on to life with the grip of his will. A few hours before his death he said that he had no fear. The end was quiet and peaceful. The democratic leader lapsed into unconsciousness at 12:30, after two nieces, the only relatives present, had kissed him goodbye.

Mr. McCarren had not spoken for an hour or more previously, and he recognized the young woman only by a slight motion of the eyes. The last sounds he heard before passing into his last sleep were the voices of the Rev. Father Zimmer and a dozen of the hospital nurses, chanting the solemn Latin prayers for the dying.

It was announced that the funeral will be from the Berry street home and that there will be a solemn requiem mass in the Church of St. Vincent De Paul, in North Sixth street, which Senator McCarren attended, probably Monday morning.

For hours before Senator McCarren's death it was expected momentarily. He was delirious most of the time. He delegated a "committee" that was to break the news of his passing to his mother. He selected for this task his nieces, Anastasia and Frances McCarren; his physician, Dr. Peter Hughes, and the Rev. Father Zimmer. Finally Father Carroll went to the McCarren home and was admitted to the room of the sick woman. He told her as gently as he could of the death of her son, but the shock left her speechless. She immediately suffered a relapse and it was feared that she would follow the senator before the day ended.

The operation for appendicitis, which resulted fatally, was performed on Senator McCarren Tuesday, October 12. When told that only an operation would give him a chance of life, the senator displayed his characteristic coolness, remarking to the doctor, "Well, what's stopping you?"

Senator McCarren came of Irish stock, but was born in New England at East Cambridge, Mass., in July, 1849. When still an infant his parents moved to Brooklyn, where he received a public school education. When still in his teens he got his first job, as a cooper. He soon turned his attention, however, to politics. He took up law as a preliminary, and then began the formation of the organization that he maintained even while he was on his death-bed. While he was dying the fight of his foes kept up, and it was even rumored that McCarren had been betrayed by his lieutenants.

"Long Pat" was the nickname given McCarren at the outset of his career, and "Long Pat" he remained to his death.

His first political conquests were in the old 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th wards of Brooklyn. He was elected to the assembly, where he served (Continued on Page Two.)

Mrs. Pankhurst, Who Recently Served a Jail Sentence in England for Disorderly Conduct, is in This Country Stirring Up Strife Among Idle Women

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English suffragette leader and the committee of American suffragettes who greeted her on her arrival at New York. She is an advocate of the militant propaganda and has served two terms in English jails while leading her followers in assaults. Just as she arrived news of the sentencing of her daughter to ten days' imprisonment was brought to her. "If the present party remains in power in England," she said, "we will be going to the polls within two years." After her presentation to an American audience in Carnegie Hall, New York, she will tour the East, lecturing for the cause. At the extreme left is Miss Inez Milholland; two to the right of her is Miss Kate Keegan; in white under the banner is Mrs. Pankhurst, and at her right is Mrs. Harriet S. Blatch.

RENOUCE VATICAN

New Spanish Cabinet Will Pull Loose From Rome

New Radical Cabinet Will Try to Come From Under the Pope's Authority—Alfonso Drives Through Streets—Will Give Details of Ferrer Trial Publicly.

(By Cable to The Times.) Madrid, Oct. 23—Spain today is on the verge of an open rupture with the vatican. The new radical cabinet, headed by Senator Moret y Prendergast, which has already taken an anti-clerical stand, and the minister of foreign affairs, Senor J. Perez Caballero, who has been Spanish ambassador at Rome, is prepared to urge the denunciation of the concordat with the vatican. It was learned today. He is now on his way from Rome.

For the first time since the Ferrer case came into prominence, King Alfonso drove through the streets, absolutely unguarded. On every side he was greeted with respect and enthusiasm. He occupied an open carriage with Queen Victoria, and they were cheered as they passed. The drive has done much to restate the king in the good graces of his people.

Among the incidents in the aftermath of the ministerial crisis, the challenge to duels made by Senator Ortuga and Deputy Soriano to the former minister of the interior, Senor De La Cierva, today attracted much attention. De La Cierva is also the defendant in several liberal actions brought by journalists.

While the new ministry today took up its work actively, the opposition is already beginning to form a solid front against the radicals.

One of the first announcements of Senor Moret was that the new cabinet would carry out to unfulfilled promise of the preceding ministry to give the details of the Ferrer trial full publicity.

NEW YORK CONTEST

Effect of McCarren's Death on Campaign

Speculation As To Who Will Step Into Her Shoes—Judge Gaynor's Tenement Houses Under Fire—Odds in Betting Drop.

(By Cable to The Times.) New York, Oct. 23—While the death of Patrick H. McCarren, the Brooklyn democratic leader, is regarded as a factor of some importance in the mayoralty campaign, the chief speculation is as to who will step into his shoes. It was asserted today that the coming visit of Richard Croker, formerly Tammany chief, before election day has for its object the straightening out of this tangle.

The rapid fire campaign in which candidates are shot about the city to a dozen points a day, continues unabated.

One of the sensations of the day was the charge made by Assemblyman George A. Green that Judge Gaynor, the Tammany candidate, has been frequently complained about to the tenement house department of the city in regard to the condition of the property he owns.

According to Green, who produced papers from the department files as proof, the complaints have been numerous and some of the improvements ordered have not been made.

Judge Gaynor was also scored by William M. Ivins, who is supporting William R. Hearst, the civic alliance candidate. Ivins declared in a Cooper Union meeting that the defeat of Gaynor and the rest of the Tammany candidates was the most important question of the campaign.

Otto T. Bannard, the republican ticket leader, in a tour of the upper Eastside, attacked Tammany in several speeches.

Bannard declared today that he was gaining votes rapidly and was more confident than ever of victory. The same was made by the supporters of the other two candidates.

William Randolph Hearst has carried his campaign into Brooklyn in earnest, making his strongest effort in the heart of Senator McCarren's old stronghold. Mr. Hearst makes the issue local to Brooklyn, advocating subways and other improvements demanded by residents of the borough.

The odds in the betting dropped today, Judge Gaynor being weaker. It had been 2 1/2 to 1 on Gaynor around democratic strongholds, but today the price fell to 2 to 1.

Honey Gets Nomination. (By Leased Wire to The Times.) San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 23—The recount of votes cast in the recent direct primary election for district attorney on the democratic ticket has been concluded. Francis J. Honey is declared the party's candidate by sixty-five votes over Charles Fleckert, republican and union labor nominee for the same office.

THE WRONG MR. JONES

Circus Teamster Gets Another Mans Money Order Cashed

G. L. Jones Gets Hold of a Money Order of Another Man by the Same Name and Gets in Trouble—The Last Man Proves His Title and the First Jones is in Jail.

Yesterday a man calling himself G. L. Jones presented himself at the police department and asked that a money order for $17 made to G. L. Jones be cashed. He put up a plausible tale, at the same time exhibiting a letter from a man named Rawls, explaining that the money was for payment for labor performed by G. L. Jones for him. He received the cash and departed.

Later in the day another G. L. Jones called at the postoffice and inquired for a letter, saying that he was expecting one from a Mr. Rawls, of Nashville, Tenn., with a money order for $17, and showed a letter from Rawls, saying that he would send him the money to Raleigh.

The postoffice authorities immediately got busy and had the first Jones arrested and the second one detained as a witness.

The case was heard this morning by United States Commissioner John Nichols. The witnesses were separated and put through a rigid examination. The bona fide Jones put up a straight story. He said he was a native of North Carolina and had worked here in Raleigh in Martin's and Ashe's mills, and that his name was George Leslie Jones. Investigation proved these statements to be correct.

The defendant Jones was then questioned. He said his name was George Lewis Jones, and that some time ago he worked as a carpenter for Mr. Rawls, a contractor, and that the money was for the services then rendered. Both of the Jones were then brought face to face and the second man caught in a number of contradictory statements, and when confronted with them, finally confessed that he got the money and had spent most of it. He gave his home as Los Angeles, Cal. In default of $500 bond for his appearance at court he was committed to jail.

Both men were employed with Barnum and Bailey's circus.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast until 8 p. m., Sunday: For North Carolina: Generally fair and colder tonight and Sunday. The southwestern disturbance has moved rapidly northeastward with increasing energy and is now central near Cincinnati. It is attended by brisk to high winds and is causing cloudy weather from the middle Mississippi Valley to New England with rain from Illinois to Pennsylvania. This disturbance is being followed by high pressure with a decided fall in temperature southward to Texas. The weather is fair in the Gulf States and throughout the southwest. Generally fair weather is indicated for this vicinity with colder late tonight and on Sunday. L. A. DENSON.

COURT NEXT WEEK

Three Weeks Term for Trial of Civil Cases

Court Convenes Monday for a Term of Three Weeks With Judge W. R. Allen Presiding—One Hundred and Seventy-one Cases Set for Trial—Motion Docket Has Forty-five.

The October term of Wake county superior court will convene Monday for a three weeks' term for the trial of civil cases only.

The calendar, as arranged by the bar, has 171 cases for trial, 84 of these being set for the first day. The cases set for the first week number 119, the second week 36 and 25 for the third. The motion docket contains 45 cases.

It is not likely that all these cases will be tried at this court, as some of them will occupy considerable time. There are over a dozen divorce cases. It is quite likely that a good many of the cases will be continued.

UNITED STATES MAY INTERVENE

(By Leased Wire to The Times) New Orleans, La., Oct. 23—That the United States is either to intervene in the Nicaraguan revolution or officially recognize the insurgents as indicated here today in the sailing of the American steamer Dictator for Bluefields. Despite the closing of the Atlantic ports of Nicaragua by President Zelaya, the department of commerce and labor authorized Port Collector McCall to clear the Dictator and she sailed at noon, carrying United States Consul Trimmer, of Cape Gracias and a big cargo of merchandise and supplies. Nicaraguan Consul General Altscam, refused to approve the ship's manifest, but this action on the part of President Zelaya's representative has been ignored, which indicates that the government is about convinced that the insurgents under Estrada have overpowered the Zelaya government.

Consul Trimmer arrived here last Sunday and reported that a famine was imminent in the Atlantic towns of Nicaragua because of a lack of food supplies. This had much to do with the government's determination to clear the Dictator despite the official closing of Zelaya's ports.

BOX PARTY LAST NIGHT.

Chief Marshal McGeachy Entertained Friends at Theatre.

Major N. H. McGeachy, of Fayetteville, chief marshal of the State Fair, had a number of his friends at a delightful box party at the theatre last night to witness the "Bohemian Girl". His guests were: Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Bowen, of Fayetteville; Mr. Pelham Moorman and Miss Rosalie Williams, of Red Springs; Mr. David Jones, of Fayetteville, and Miss Besse Haywood, of Norfolk, Col. Geo. L. of Wilmington, and Mr. O. O. Sanders, of Fayetteville.

THE BIGGEST SUCCESS OF ALL THE FAIRS

Greatest Fair in the History of The Agricultural Society Has Closed

OTHER FEATURES

Many Other Attractions Besides the Fair and the Week in Raleigh Has Been a Big One—People Looking Forward to a Great State Exhibition Next Year—The Time For Such An Event Proportionally, As Next Year Will Mark the 50th Anniversary of the Fair—Fair Has Reached High Water Mark and Time is Ripe For the Great Exhibition.

Today is like the quiet after the storm. There is a loosening of the tension of excitement that has been at the highest notch in the city during the past week. Never before has Raleigh had so many splendid attractions, brilliant events and delightful amusements packed into one week and there has been no lack of people to patronize them. That Raleigh has had something worth enjoying has been fully evidenced by the tremendous throngs that have overrun the city since last Sunday.

Beginning with the opening of the fair on Friday down to the time of closing the gates last night it has been the biggest success of any fair in the history of the state.

The large aggregation of really good show on the midway has been greatly appreciated and enjoyed. The check that was put on all disorder and gambling added greatly to the success of the occasion.

The exhibits were large and better than ever with a much larger number of exhibitors. The free attractions were all that could be desired, keeping large crowds amused all day. The races were of an unusually high standard, several records being broken during the week.

The chief marshal and his aides, as well as the special fair police, deserve the highest praise for the excellent order which was preserved.

While the fair was the great big feature of the week there was no lack of other amusements, the big football game between A. & M. and Kentucky, on Thursday, and the star attraction, Barnum & Bailey's big circus yesterday afternoon and night, claiming their share of the thousands of visitors. The splendid circus parade yesterday morning brought pleasure to an immense throng, many of whom were not fortunate enough to see the inside of the big tent.

There was no let-up of the excitement at the close of the day, for as the brilliant illumination of Fayetteville street burst forth it became the popular place for the crowds to find amusement. With a good show at the Academy every night, as well as other social attractions, the annual Capital Club dance and Marshall's ball there was enough enjoyment for everyone.

As it is the purpose of the fair management and North Carolina Agricultural Society to go forward each year, and as this fair of 1909 could hardly be surpassed outside of a great state exposition, the people are already looking forward to that great occasion next year.

The time is propitious, as next year will mark the 50th anniversary of the fair. Interest has gradually been increasing in the event during the past year until it has reached a high-water mark, which should be marked by the celebration of a two-weeks' exposition. With the enlarging of the grounds, erection of new and suitable buildings the state will have a great occasion to look forward to. It will be an exposition worthy of the home-coming of the children of the Old North State from far and near.

Friday's Races.

The races yesterday continued to be of chief importance and although no records were broken they kept up the high standard established during the week. First Race. 2:25 pace, stake $300. Major Viceroy . . . 1 1 1 1 Herd . . . 2 2 2 Rocky Mountains . . . 3 3 3 Bertha W. . . . 4 Dis. Time: 2:19 1/4, 2:24, 2:24. Second Race. 2:22 trot, stake $300.
