BLIZZARD IS THE WORST FOR YEARS

Death List From Storm Has Reached Five In New York Alone

THE STORM GENERAL

Fourteen inches of snow has fallen in New York. More than for all last year. Milk and food famine is threatened. Death list of five and still climbing.

(By Leased Wire to The Times) New York, Jan. 15.—Driven by a gale the blizzard—the worst in 22 years—has continued unbroken since midnight Thursday.

The death list of the storm in New York alone has reached five early today with three dying from other points indicated that the total would be much higher when the final tally is made.

Mayor William J. Gaynor was impelled while trying to reach his home at St. James L. L. and escaped with his life by a narrow margin.

Traffic in the city and suburbs was practically stalled, and throughout the whole area affected by the storm was seriously crippled, nearly every train reaching New York being behind time.

Less from the ocean say that the storm is one of the worst for many years, and more severe in many respects than the Christmas blizzard. The outer bay was filled with steamers held at anchor.

Situations nearly a bad omen through the storm swept section from Indiana to the Atlantic, and from Virginia to Canada.

(By Leased Wire to The Times.) Providence, R. I., Jan. 15.—The house of representatives has unanimously repudiated the North Carolina bonds project by passing without debate an act introduced by Representative Henry Culler.

The measure was side-tracked in the senate, however, and was referred to the judiciary committee, together with similar bills introduced by Senator Arnold and Senator W. M. P. Bowen.

Senator Arnold's bill contained a provision directing the governor to cancel the bonds and present them to the state of North Carolina.

ELECTION IS STIRRING UP JONH BULL

Balloting Opened Up Today Which Marks Crisis in Affairs of England

RIOTING AT POLLS

Real Test of Strength Came Today When Election Began and it Will be Two Weeks Before Balloting is Over—Lancashire Chief Center of Interest as it is the Pulse by Which Elections are Recorded—Liberals Now Hold Larger Majority Than At Any Time Since 1836—Much Like An American Political Fight.

(By Cable to The Times.) London, Jan. 15.—The real test of strength in the general election came today when balloting opened in twelve London and 64 provincial constituencies, returning nearly 80 members of parliament.

The Lancashire elections were one of the principal centers of interest, because it is in that industrial district—particularly at Manchester, the cotton center—that the first sign of how the election goes, is usually obtained.

The earliest returns today were of unopposed candidates. The first report were J. W. Lowther, unionist, for Penrith; Cumberland; Patrick O'Brien, nationalist, Kilkenny; Sir Edward Carson and J. Campbell, unionists, Dublin University; and S. P. Butcher and J. P. H. Rawlinson, unionist, Cambridge University.

Among the constituencies voting today were Birmingham, Wolverhampton and Bolton. Although the final returns will not be in for many days, and the election will cover all six weeks, the returns from these and other equally important places give the assured result tonight.

In all, there are 670 members of the house of commons, and 263 members of the house of lords. The following strength: Liberals 364; laborites 55; Irish nationalists 85; socialists 1. Against them—the government block—was the opposition of Conservatives 112, and liberal unionists 26. That liberal majority, returned in 1906, was the greatest held by either party since the liberal majority of 309 in 1832.

Of the 670 places to be filled, 432 are apportioned to England; 103 to Ireland; 12 to Scotland and 30 to Wales. Today's balloting brought to an end the hottest campaign that had ever been waged in England. In many respects it was more like an American political fight than any of its predecessors and every factor possible was employed, including moving pictures.

The struggle between the liberal government, with its reform budget which was rejected by the house of lords and the conservatives, was fought principally on the right of the lords—which have not been the subject of a general fight for three centuries.

BOSTON CENTER OF STORM TODAY

(By Leased Wire to The Times) Boston, Mass., Jan. 15.—Boston is today the center of a storm of wind and snow which has piled up drifts ashore and tremendous waves at sea along the coast from Delaware Breakwater to Portsmouth, N. H. and from Milliana to the Atlantic.

The snowfall has been heavier than at any time since 1898. At 8 o'clock this morning the measurement of the level was about eleven inches with the prospect that the fifteen inch mark would be reached before night.

Storm in the Caribbean. (By Leased Wire to The Times.) New Orleans, La., Jan. 15.—The steamer Dictator, which arrived this morning from Bluefields, reports a four days storm in the Caribbean Sea and Gulf of Mexico. It is feared that shipping has suffered severely in the gale. The officers of the steamer Dictator declare the storm to be the worst known in years.

less from the ocean say that the storm is one of the worst for many years, and more severe in many respects than the Christmas blizzard. The outer bay was filled with steamers held at anchor.

Traffic about New York by water was hazardous and all ferry lines ran with difficulty. Thousands of commuters had extreme difficulty in reaching their places of business in Manhattan.

Seven persons lost their lives, three were mortally hurt and hundreds of others sustained minor injuries.

One nine-year-old boy, Frank Miles, was reported dying today in Roosevelt Hospital. He was sent on an errand by his mother and was overcome on the street, toppling head foremost into a snow drift.

Source of taxicabs and other motor vehicles held in drifts and in many instances horses could make no headway against the storm and were taken to safety, leaving their wagons derelict.

When the storm is over, the snow will be piled up in drifts, but the streets will be cleared as the snow melts. The snowfall has been heavier than at any time since 1898.

LIGHTSHIP TORN AWAY FROM POST

(By Leased Wire to The Times.) Newport, R. I., Jan. 15.—Fighting gallantly with all the force of her puny engines, the Nantuxet Shoals lightship, No. 85, braved the most terrific of Atlantic gales after she had been torn from her moorings.

She carried fifteen men besides two wireless operators, and her job is to guard the lights—she is the first sign of America they see—from the treacherous graveyard where she is stationed. No. 85 has a fine ten mushroom anchor and 1,000 feet of chain, but in spite of this she was torn away by the storm as she had been a dory.

PEACE PATCHED UP WITH INSURGENTS

(By Leased Wire to The Times.) Washington, Jan. 15.—Peace, though by the formal declaration of insurgents only a temporary one, has been patched up between the members of the house organization and those of the anti-Cannon contingent.

The members of the house organization and those of the anti-Cannon contingent. The terms of the truce were made public yesterday through statements issued by President Taft, Representative Hayes, acting for the insurgents, and Representative Dwight, the "whip" of the house, speaking of the regulars. A purport of all three declarations shows that the hatchet has been buried for the time, and that it will be dug up before the close of the caucus to be held in the members of the house of lords who can trace his ancestry back for generations. It is this class of the British peerage who would lose most if the house of lords were abolished, or if it were made an elective body. They have held their seats for generations, owing to their ancestry, and have done little toward building up the country.
