SHELBY WINS CASE AGAINST MILL COMPANY

Source of Drinking Water Supply Must Not Be Polluted

STATEWIDE INTEREST

Principle Laid Down by Court in Regard to Shelby vs. Mill & Power Company Similar to That Laid Down in Case of Durham vs. Eno Mills—Prescriptive Right Not Recognized—Number of Other Opinions Filed Today in the Supreme Court.

By affirming the judgment of the lower court in the case of Town of Shelby vs. Mill & Power Company, the supreme court today further emphasized the principle that the legislature may pass all laws not incompatible with the constitution of the public.

The court did not take the argument of the defense seriously, for it held that a prescriptive right to empty sewage into a stream did not prevent the legislature from changing the laws in the interest of health.
