Associated Press.

Entered at the postoffice at Raleigh, N. C., as second-class matter.

About all of the politicians, real and imagined, were at Chapel Hill Tuesday.

Mr. E. J. Justice, who has had considerable experience in railway legislation, extra sessions, etc., is spoken of as the campaign manager for Chief Justice Walter Clark.

That is an important meeting of the Raleigh Health League, scheduled for tonight. Every member of the league should attend and should take somebody else with him.

AN ATTRACTIVE SERIAL.

The Raleigh Daily Times has secured for its readers, and especially that portion of them who love and remember the men and stories of the Civil War, the new book, "Recollections of Alexander H. Stephens."

BOXING AND RACING.

The Indianapolis authorities declined to allow two prize-fighters to have a bout on Memorial Day, but encouraged the automobile races on the speedway.

A bruiser is likely to be temporarily disabled in an encounter with an antagonist and most states have enacted laws prohibiting the sport.

The last Hoosier holiday was very fruitful—one man was killed and several were injured.

FARM LIFE SCHOOL.

Nothing more important was passed by the last general assembly of North Carolina than that which provided for the establishment of farm life schools, in various counties in the state.

The last census of the United States shows the considerable increase in its population, it likewise showed that this increase was in a large measure limited to cities, and that the rural district in some states actually lost population.

In no section of the country has there been greater improvements in agricultural methods than in North Carolina. It is not at all unusual for good farmers now to make a bale of cotton to the acre, and 10 or 15 barrels of corn to the acre.

In addition to the study of agriculture our people need to study what kind of cattle and horses to raise, how many of each, and the profit to be made from raising cattle and horses.

Another subject of vital importance is the subject of home-making. Many of the homes of our people are not supplied with the modern conveniences and therefore the life of the mother and wife becomes one of drudgery.

It is the object of the farm life school to apply itself to this particular task, and to teach each pupil to be able to perform the practical duties of every day life.

While the last general assembly provided for the establishment of farm life schools it provided for only 10 for the entire state.

The great mass-meeting of the citizens of Wake has been called to meet at the court house at 11:30 a. m., June 3, to determine whether the good people of Wake county will be given the opportunity to vote on this question.

eral assembly of North Carolina passed the bill providing for these schools.

Three counties have already provided for these schools, leaving only seven to be established; hence the measure has been well weighed and considered and been approved.

The cost of these schools is inconsiderable. It is true that a building and equipment, and a farm, costing $25,000 must be provided, but information has already been received that several townships in the county are sufficiently interested in securing the location of the school to provide a large part, if not all, of the money necessary for farm-building and equipment.

The great mass-meeting to be held on June 3 will settle the question as to whether the good people of Wake county shall have the opportunity to vote for one of these schools.

Senator J. T. Cobb, who framed the farm life school bill, Governor Kitchin, and other prominent speakers, are expected to be present and to speak.

Press Comment.

The Pluck of Coney Island.

The Spartan who permitted a fox to eat at his innards without outward sign of pain, the old Romans who killed their sons rather than strain their own sense of justice, and all the other gaunt heroes of history who are synonyms for courage and fortitude must all step back from the line to make way for the heroes of Coney Island.

Had Col. Ferrari, who runs a menagerie at Coney, ever had a fox gnawing at his innards he surely would have tramped the animal to make money for him. Unlike the heroes of other days, who accepted their disasters with fortitude, the Coney Island men went a step further and turned their misfortunes into gold.

There was Col. Ferrari. While the fire was at its height the policemen had to kill his trained lion. Did the rise of the sun on Sunday morning find the colonel weeping over the carcass? Not a bit of it.

The restaurant man whose entire plant was burned to the ground had rigged up tables and was serving sandwiches and bottles of beer in the midst of the ruins.

There's pluck. Its the quality that makes for success wherever it is found. There is no trouble in the world unless one thinks trouble. Get some of the Coney Island spirit and be happy!—Washington Post.

Lumber and Lorimer.

There are two ways of killing most of the trusts. One, direct and sure, is to take away the monopolistic privileges conferred upon them by the tariff.

one of its principal agents in the senate, William Lorimer of Illinois, is confronted by the charge that he was elected by bribery, and, singularly, it is shown that the lumber trust collected the money that was used in his behalf.

So lumber and Lorimer stand together, both exposed, both under charges, both practically convicted, but both supremely representative of the tariff system.

England's king has come into closer contact with the public during the preliminaries which mark the approach of his coronation, and it is said that his consideration and tactfulness have been such as to raise him immeasurably in the regard of the people.

It is evidence of George's wisdom that he took note of these preparations for coronation, and that he called in a newspaper man to voice his sentiments of disapproval of them.

In Defense of "Damn." A writer in the London Times protests that the time has come when the "effectation of printing the word damn as 'd-n' or 'd-' is abolished."

There is the least moral objection to spelling the word in full, that objection is not removed by conveying the ideas by means of a "d-" with or without an 'n' at the tail.

JUNE 2.—Forecast.—For Raleigh and Vicinity: Fair tonight and Saturday. For North Carolina: Fair tonight, warmer in extreme west portion, Saturday fair; light to moderate variable winds.

the pity of it is that it cannot be used, except in the street, by those who could employ it to advantage oftentimes.

To print the word damn, in this form, "d-n" is something like the very vulgar way of calling a leg a limb, and affectation that is wholly vulgar and for which there can be no excuse except in the minds of the vulgar and common.
