LOVE'S WEATHER.

(From the New York Sun.) When we were young, my Hear And you had such a wealth of golden hair. I used to deem In young love's blissful dream The golden days most fair.

But now that we are old. And on your brow I see those tresse blest

All silver gray. From gold, I turn away, And deem the gray days best!

When there is rain, my Heart, hold the torrents close, and know They but repeat

The story old and sweet Of our commingled tears. And when the clouds come by

And color my ways with hues night No doubts of woe Are ever mine-I know Where I shall find the light

The forecast of my days I ever find within your dear eyes pent:

Or cloud or sun So long as we are one, My heart, am I content! JOHN HENDRICK BANGS.

It is not considered likely however that whipping will be entirely abolished Council and the board of education have already decreed that there must be no more cruel or unreasonable whippings, and that any teachers guilty of cruelty will be promptly

Mothers---and other ladies

This is a darning needle—a relie of antiquity.

Perhaps some of you can remember when this little article was of common, frequent use. Like the spinning wheel, tallow candle and the old stage coach, it has been supplanted by something much better.

Not long ago darning was a part of mother's domestic duties. Friday was just as much darning day as Monday was wash day and Tuesday ironing day. Now-a-days every day is Buster Brown day.

Mother has entered the leisure class because the whole family wears Buster Browns. Pa and Ma and Sis and Buster all wear Buster Browns and they all pay 25 cents a pair-buy less, pay less and mother's long since quit daraing. She now keeps her darning needle in the parlor under a glass, along with the wax flowers.
