HOLD ELECTION NEXT TUESDAY

Disposal of Market House to Be Decided at Polls By Raleigh Taxpayers

SPECULATION ON RESULT

The Proposition to Sell and Abandon the Present Market House Vies With the Proposition to Sell and Purchase Another Site—These Two Questions Appear to Be Uppermost—People Will Decide the Matter Next Tuesday.

With the election Tuesday to determine on what disposition shall be made of the market house—that old proposition which has been staring Raleigh people in the face for years—interest today in the outcome was greater than at any time since the election was called. There has been no betting on the result, though advocates of one plan or another are zealous enough in their predictions of the outcome Tuesday. At this time it appears that the result will be close.

Three propositions are to be voted on: Whether to sell the present building and site and not have a central market; whether to sell and build another market on Wilmington street; or whether to remodel the present building at an estimated cost of $35,000.

Can the present building, remodeled or otherwise, ever be made to fill the bill of an up-to-date market center? That is the question being asked. Answering the question in the negative, many persons reply that it can be made the point of congregation for the various flies, other insects and odors that have, in Raleigh's experience, been an integral part, as it were, of a market house.

The two propositions that seem to have most supporters are that to sell and abandon the market house, that and to remodel. These are the questions that will likely be uppermost and when the votes are counted Tuesday night they will show, in the opinion of many, sentiment about equally divided on the question.

What effect the reported organization of the butchers in the market house in favor of keeping the present building will have on the election remains to be seen. With a strong, organized effort they can undoubtedly do much toward deciding the question, and that they will exert their influence is hardly to be doubted.

The disposition of the property is the business of the voters, and the matter is now up to them.

Law on the Subject.

A statement of the law on this subject follows:

No. 1. If a majority of the votes cast shall be for the "sale of the market house," then the market house and land shall be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, and the money received from the sale of said market house shall be placed in the sinking fund of the city of Raleigh, but it is provided also that the Mayor and Board of Aldermen may advertise for offerings of any of the present securities, notes or bonds heretofore issued by the city of Raleigh, and if it is possible to secure any of the same at a price that is just and reasonable, then the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen shall purchase such securities, notes and bonds of the city of Raleigh.

It will be observed, therefore, that the money derived from the sale of the market house, if it is sold, shall be used in the purchase of present outstanding debts if the city authorities can secure them at a price that is just and reasonable.

No. 2. If a majority of the voters shall vote for "remodeling the market house," then the Mayor and Board of Aldermen are not, as has been stated, required to issue bonds amounting to $35,000 to remodel the city market house, but they are authorized to issue bonds for such sum as may be necessary in their discretion, not to exceed $35,000.

No. 3. If a majority of the voters shall vote for the "removal of the market house," then it can be put in no other place except the square directly east of the present site and the city authorities shall have power, if they cannot purchase, to condemn this property in the same manner as property may now be condemned by the city authorities for the location or opening of new streets. If this proposition carries, the money derived from the sale of the market house shall be used in paying for this site and for the erection of a new market house.

It is further provided that if neither of these propositions have a majority, then another election shall be held within sixty days under the same rules and regulations of the preceding election and at said election the two propositions receiving the highest number of votes shall alone be submitted to the citizens of Raleigh.

The law under which this election is held is chapter 247 of the Private Laws of 1911, page 650.

Orville Wright's remarkable escape from death. The photograph shows his "motorless biplane glider" about to strike the ground after its fall of 200 feet on Monday, (October 23) at Kill Devil Camp, Kitty Hawk, N. C., where the Wright Brothers have been conducting their wonderful experiments. When the machine lurched and turned turtle completely in the air Wright was thrown from his seat and lunged downward. With marvelous agility he scrambled back into a normal posture during the five seconds of the fall and, as a result, was entirely uninjured. Just before the accident Wright had done a thing unprecedented in the annals of aviation. Without motive power he flew the "motorless glider" for over ten minutes in the teeth of a forty mile gale, staying constantly over a 300-foot electric wire, he had previously drawn upon the ground. The entire world of aeronautics is astounded by the wonderful accomplishment, which the Wright Brothers say, presages the provision of automatic stability of aeroplanes, by an adaptation of the scientific principle involved.

When first seen by a reporter the Indian appeared as though he were willing to talk but as soon as the conversation approached the subject of the crime he said "I can't stand much from you" and would not say much more. He said, however, that he had been to Birdtown to play ball and had met the young girl and asked her why "she was mad" at him. He also said she had struck him on the head with a stone.
