ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORTS.

TO CITY SUBSCRIBERS. You will confer a favor on the management of The Times by informing us of any irregularities in the delivery of your paper at any time.

We are glad the Booker Washington episode didn't occur in the south. Our northern friends would have held it up as a case of persecution if we had been involved.

Charleston is not so slow after all. She is going to get into moving pictures. She has made a contract with a moving picture concern to show pictures of Charleston and vicinity throughout the country.

The death of Col. Henry C. Dockery brings genuine regret to hosts of friends throughout the state. Col. Dockery was the editor of the Rockingham Post, was one of the largest farmers in the state and was interested in many business enterprises.

A preacher in Philadelphia is responsible for this statement: "Conditions in the business world are such today that the business man must take gross advantage of his competitors or go to the wall."

Most honest men, we believe, will take issue with that statement. Success is more sure to come to the honest business man than to the one who lets dishonesty creep into his methods.

WILL HOLD DESPERADO.

Old Bill Miner Will Not Be Given Another Chance.

(Special to The Times.) Atlanta, Nov. 7.—Old Bill Miner will not be given another chance to escape. He will be treated by the prison commission of Georgia as a desperado as long as he lives, and will be watched over with especial vigilance as a deadly, dangerous man, whether in convict camp or at the prison farm.

RODGERS' FLIGHT.

Aviator Rodgers has made a new record for aerial navigation in his flight across the American continent, from New York to Pasadena, California. His trip is the longest on record in this country, if not in the world. The distance covered by him is 4,231 miles. He left New York September 17 and landed at Pasadena November 4. It will thus be seen that it took him nearly seven weeks to make the trip.

His flight is regarded as a triumph in aviation. Of course it shows the imperfections of the flying machine, as well as its possibilities. The long delays, because of wind and weather, show that the aviator has not yet conquered the elements. They also give renewed force to the latest efforts of the Wright brothers to devise a machine that will fly against the wind and maintain itself in the air without power, if necessary.

Mr. Rodgers has won renown as an aviator and that is his only reward, as he missed a $50,000 prize by a few days. About a year ago Mr. William Randolph Hearst offered $50,000 to the first man who would make the flight before October 20, 1911. Mr. Rodgers hoped to win this when he started, but the difficulties he encountered kept him from winning the prize by a few days, the Hearst offer expiring five days before he reached the Pacific coast.

Whatever may be individual judgment upon the proposition in general, it is not likely that Raleigh is the only town in the state where blind-tigering is being found a fairly profitable industry.

We do not claim all the honors in this direction. We would not even claim the prize as the leading blind tiger town in the state. But we have them here, selling liquor. If not openly, at least so freely that almost any citizen of the city can point them out. It is a distinction we are not proud of and publicity is not made for advertising purposes. The people who believe in law enforcement are patient and long-suffering, but one of these days they are going to put the screws on the high class blind tiger so tight that he will find it more profitable and requiring less physical labor to engage in some other business.

Press Comment.

Pitt Fair All Right. Everybody is praising everybody over the success of the Pitt county fair. Really, everybody who had a hand in planning it and carrying it out is entitled to praise.—The Reflector.

Has 53 Sundays.

The present year has 53 Sundays in it, says the Greensboro News, and it will be 109 years before we will see another year with as many Sundays. We can hear a chorus of enforced week-end waterwagonists drinking exuberant toasts to the man who made the calendar.—Rocky Mt. Telegram.

It Is All Wrong.

The Lincoln Times (Republican) says: Hon. M. L. Shipman, state commissioner of labor and printing, last week issued an official statement of the cost of raising cotton in North Carolina. He says it costs the farmers of this state 6 1/2 cents a pound. He is trying to convince farmers that they are making money selling cotton at 8 cents. The Democrats are turning heaven and earth to convince farmers that "tariff reform" has not ruined them.

If, as the Times intimates, Mr. Shipman is playing politics in the "official statement" he has issued, our contemporary convicts itself of doing the same thing. And both views of the matter are all wrong. On the present basis of expenses, the farmer cannot make money growing cotton at 8 cents a pound, neither has "tariff reform" ruined the farmer. There has been no tariff reform in the sense implied by our Lincoln contemporary. The country is still living under the Payne-Aldrich tariff, which no Democrat endorses and which very few Republicans are found to defend.

How's Your Aim?

The first thing in life is to have an aim. Select your target, as it were, and then aim just as straight as you can—and fire. You may miss the mark the first time, but reload and shoot again. Don't get excited on account of failure No. 1, or even Nos. 2, 3 and so on, because excitement never wins out. Hysteria is not conducive of a steady hand, or a clear eye and without these you are not very apt to ring the bull's eye. Some few, very few people accidentally hit the target by shooting at random, but the majority of folks, the great majority never come within a yard of the mark by such shooting. So don't waste your ammunition which in this respect is your energy and your time, both very valuable to you, because energy uselessly expended means weakening you for the struggle for attainment and loss of time cannot be recovered and therefore means fewer days for you than you deserve should you grasp it. So first take aim, and second let your mind be calm, your hand steady and your eye clear. If you haven't an aim, that is if you haven't planned your vision on a target, how can you expect to win the prize? If you have aimed and missed the mark and get so disgusted that you become mad and excited, or "lose your head," you have greatly lessened your chances of tapping the bell. The well drilled soldier is worth three of the untrained, crude fighter; that has been shown time and time again.—Wilmington Dispatch.

That Dutch Treat.

Drinking and then paying for one's own drinks is the meaning of the words "Dutch Treat." It is contended that this is the only way to drink if a person insists on drinking and the German-American National Alliance is going to endeavor to establish the custom firmly in America. When two or more Germans go to a beer garden, restaurant or cafe together none of them thinks of buying food or drink for his companions, says the Knoxville Sentinel. Each orders what he is able to pay for, consumes it if he likes, orders more if he is not satisfied and goes away when he pleases. It needs no argument that this is better manners as well as a safer custom than the American practice of lining up at a bar and several, in some cases, each ordering drinks for all that happens to know, and in some cases that he does not know or care for. The American habit is essentially vulgar. It is unknown anywhere in Europe, except among the Americans, who may be traveling there. The American habit almost necessitates occasional intemperance on the part of men who visit bars at all. To refuse to buy a round of drinks after drinking at another's expense may subject one to the suspicion of meanness, being a dead beat. To refuse to drink sometimes elicits insults, as it is taken as an insult by many of befuddled brain. The German idea in beer restaurants has made surprisingly slow progress in this country. It may be because the German newcomers and their offspring wish to adopt American habits. However there are in some of the large cities resorts where beer is dispensed along with coffee, chocolate, milk and other beverages.

where good food is taken with the drink, where the bar is unknown newspapers and weeklies abound there is a social atmosphere and leisure hovers in the tobacco smoke. To popularize this idea brewers fitted up an exhibition restaurant of this kind in Chicago last summer. The oaken tables, curiously carved, the quaint steins, the pictures everything was in the best German style. What was the educational result we are not informed, but the steins were stolen.

The campaign was not permanently checked by this setback was a natural corollary of German persistence.—Ledger-Dispatch.

It startled the world when the astounding claims were first made for Bucklin's Arnica Salve, but forty years of wonderful cures have proved them true, and everywhere it is now known as the best salve on earth for burns, boils, scalds, sores, cuts, bruises, sprains, swellings, eczema, chapped hands, fever sores and piles. THE TRUE EDUCATIONAL IDEAL.

It is an entirely wrong principle in education so to direct the work of students that they can justly acquire the idea that what is in view is the acquisition of the knowledge of facts and methods. It is important that one should learn the principle facts of history or physics, for example. It is important that one should get a good acquaintance with the methods and principles of arithmetic or geometry. Without denying the great usefulness of such knowledge, it should still be maintained that education has properly a much higher object. That object is the discipline of the mind. This should be the standard before every teacher. It should, as opportunity offers and as the developing mind is able to grasp it, be repeatedly set before the student.

The principle may be well illustrated in connection with gymnastic life presents and which are so very different from those met with in books.

Let the teachers then explain that the acquisition of a correct knowledge of spelling, for example, is good indeed; but that the exercise of the mind in habits of correctness and attention to details is a higher thing that may be gotten at the same time. Let the teacher welcome even an unsuccessful mathematical solution that proceeds along different lines from those set forth in the book; because the effort to produce the solution is indicative of real mental activity. The teacher, whatever his or her department may be—who thoroughly grasps and maintains the principle that the highest pedagogical duty is to awaken and develop minds and not merely to install knowledge will become a benefactor of the human race in so far as mental matters go.

From a Comfy Bed to an Icy Room B-U-R-R Makes one shiver to think of it It's hard enough under ordinary conditions to crawl from under those nice warm covers, but to have to dress in a room when the thermometer is down around freeze—shivers and shakes—B-U-R-R. Don't do it. What's the use when it's so easy to make that room warm and comfortable?

Vulcan Odorless Gas Heater

Have it connected to your gas jet. Then 10 minutes before getting-up-time, jump out of bed, light the heater, pull down the windows and crawl back in bed. Lay there in comfort for 10 minutes.
