THE GAME. If it's a game, then let us get in it! If it's a game, let's endeavor to win it! Life as it must be, that is the word! Life as it must be—blithe as a bird— Up with the morning and out let us go, Brave for the battle and strong for the foe! If it's a game, then we want to take part! If it's a game, let us play with our hearts! Plunge in it strongly, a hand if you will In its toil and its strife and its song and its thrill; A sword in its struggle, if struggle we must, And a brave battle, men, to the heights or the dust! If it's a game, not a minute to lose! If it's a game, but one purpose to chase! Off with the doubting and on with the flame Of soul and of heart in the heat of the game, Taking our chances like sportsmen of life, Not a whit weakened with wounds of the strife! If it's a game, then it's our game forever— Avault with the fear and awake to endeavor! Plunge in it, lunge in it, up to the hilt, The dastard who dallies, let his be the guilt! Thus must we face it, thus must we know The game with our grit, its blow with our blow! From The Baltimore Sun.

than good, wholesome comedy, and "She Stoops to Conquer" is a wholesome, honest, human play, possessing the qualities that have never failed to please. Samuel Johnson, Goldsmith's friend and autocrat of the age, said: "I know of no comedy for many years that has so much exhilarated an audience." Goldsmith touched nothing that he did not adorn, and in comedy he discarded the well known theatrical types of his contemporaries and went to nature for his models of men and women. "She Stoops to Conquer" won an unqualified success on its first production in 1773 and is to this day one of the most popular comedies on the English stage. The opening scene shows an old-fashioned English house—the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hardcastle, the latter being a genuine "country snob" who, aspiring to the fashions of London, says she is tired of "such old-fashioned trumpery," and thinks they should take a trip to town now and then to "rub off the rust a little."

The second scene is an Alehouse Room, in which Tony Lumpkin and his fellows make merry with song, Tony singing "The Three Pigeons"—a song often sung by Goldsmith himself. The following scenes occur in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hardcastle, with the exception of a "garden scene" when, under cover of darkness, Mrs. Hardcastle mistakes her husband for a highwayman, and earnestly pleads for the life of her son Tony. The cast is one of unusual merit, carefully selected from our city's most talented players. The leading roles are as follows: Mrs. Hardcastle—Miss Flora Crook. Miss Hardcastle—Miss Haskins. Miss Neville—Mrs. John A. Ferrell. Maid—Miss Sallie Oldham. Mr. Hardcastle—Dr. S. R. Horton. Sir Charles Marlow—Mr. E. E. Culbreth. Young Marlow (his son)—Dr. L. O. Morris. Hastings—Mr. C. F. Kirkpatrick. Tony Lumpkin—Mr. Will Heller. Digory—Andrew Crinkley. Servants, etc.—Samuel Telfair, Jr., and William H. Rogers.

The play is given under the auspices of St. Luke's Circle of King's Daughters, and is for the benefit of St. Luke's Home—a cause that is dear to the hearts of all. Prices 75 and 50 cents. General admission 25 cents. Seats on sale at Wake Drug Store.

AN ALLEGED BANKER BEHIND PRISON BARS

Declaring that he is connected with one of the banks at Lexington, a nice looking young fellow, giving his name as M. H. Peacock, is today spending his hours behind the bars in the station house. The charge against him is larceny.

Yesterday afternoon an overcoat belonging to Mr. John Roberts was taken from R. E. Lewis' pool room, and immediately an officer was notified. Later on Peacock returned to the pool room and was pointed out to Officer Barbour as the one suspected of taking the overcoat. The officer approached him and told him he wanted to go to his room and make a search for the coat, but he stoutly protested. Finally he agreed and informed the officer that he was stopping in the city with a personal friend of his, who is boarding at a certain boarding house in the city.

The officer carried him to the boarding house and was there told that he only got his meals there but roomed at another place, the street number of the rooming place being furnished the officer. He carried his prisoner on to the room, but on getting into the room he found the electric lights were out of down stairs, so the officer went down stairs and turned on the switch. When he got back to the room upstairs he found his man sitting on the bed with the covering nicely turned back. After searching the room the officer asked to look on the bed and was refused. Not to be outdone he forced his man off and there spied a sleeve of the coat under the quilt. Pulling it out, the officer found he had the coat that answered every description and being unable to account for its being there Peacock was arrested and carried to the station house where he spent the night, and today.
