UNDERWOOD THE GUEST

Delivered An Address On George Washington

Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Guest of Philadelphia Society of the Cincinnati-Washington, Master of the Underlying Needs of the Country.

Philadelphia, Feb. 23.—Congressman Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house, delivered an address in this city last night at the annual banquet of the State Society of the Cincinnati. His subject was George Washington, and he said in part:

"Washington did not foresee all the perplexing problems with which we have to deal today, in our tariff or in our great corporations, in our currency, in our foreign possessions, or in a reconciliation of the rights of labor and capital; he did not foresee the vast task we all have, whether native or foreign born, of taking the new material constantly coming to our shores and assimilating it into our growth and moulding it into a loyal and intelligent support of our institutions; he did not see the menace of destructive socialism nor the extent to which, unfortunately, we were to go in substituting party interest for political principles, though as to this he gave us occasional warning. Nevertheless he did foresee sufficient of our problems to be able to commend to us a course of the principles of which, if steadily adhered to, should bring us safely through all the perils to which we may be exposed. While he did not outline the by-laws, so to speak, that must, from time to time, be framed and adopted for the detailed life of this country, he did understand, as no one else understood, the arduous principles upon which were to rest the security and the welfare of our national life. And subject always to his urgent advice against permanent alliances with foreign powers, like a high priest among men, he preached the gospel of tolerance, of benevolence, of peace, of reasonableness and of righteousness toward all peoples.

"Washington's distinguishing common sense and practical turn of mind served him well in the administration of his high office. Few, if any, mere generalities or platitudinous schemes for action were suggested by him; but, on the contrary, he seemed to be master of the underlying principles of the business needs of the country as he had been of the plans of his campaign. At the time when so many of us are disposed to put upon the statute books nostrums for relief from our industrial and financial and economic evils, it will be well for us to call to mind the striking contrast between the moderate volume and temperate character of laws enacted during his presidency and so much of our present day legislation of the experimental sort, reflecting often merely a view of today that is likely to be the heresy of tomorrow, and attempting to deal with the objectionable tendency before it is seen that it will not be arrested of itself, or before we have sufficient understanding of it to be in a position to know or apply the appropriate remedy. Accordingly the recommendations and the legislation of Washington's administration were not along guess work lines; but the elements of soberness, patience and wisdom which he so invariably manifested, were typical of the plans he favored and adopted to bring order out of financial and industrial chaos, promote industry among the people and restore their energies by opening up new sources of revenue and prosperity, and by assuring men that they should gather and be secure in the possession of the harvest of their labor.

"There is a great need too for us in this day when constitutional restraint has become irksome to many, never to turn a deaf ear to the stirring appeal of Washington to his people—that the departments into which our government is constitutionally divided shall be kept with determined hand within their respective boundaries. Speaking here not as a party man but as a citizen of the republic, my observation and reflection have shown me how treacherously easy is the transition from centralization of government—which those of the republican party set so much store by and which a good many of us democrats are inclined to acquiesce in—to a personalization of government and thereto usurpation of government. Washington in all his career uttered no greater truth than when he declared that a constitutional government, under such circumstances, become almost, as a matter of course, a despotism. For a long time, unfortunately, this was the view of the American people; and when they have departed from it a long and ominous step has been taken, not only in the commission of error, but towards establishing evil precedent.

"We have, however, problems of a serious nature confronting us for solution, and doubtless they will increase as time goes on. We, as people, have tolerated the doing of things which must be undone or made right and not condoned; we have at times set too much store by mere material success and judged as of minor consequence things which broaden and elevate and ennoble a nation; we have made compromise with things of evil import. We have, at times, been un mindful of the rights of others as we have hurried on to the realization of ambitious plans, and, in our indifference to the demands of good citizenship, we have been guilty of or acquiesced in a course of conduct that has given rise to sullen expressions of an unrest to which we cannot afford to be unconcerned listeners; for unchecked unrest is likely to breed discontent and discontent in its turn disorder. And, unless we frankly recognize this, we shall have no reasonable hope of correcting the conditions which arouse, if they do not altogether justify these expressions, and which are a menace not only to our continuing prosperity but to our self-respect and our repute in the world. Again and again, as this goes on, in obedience to popular clamor, we shall be tempted to enact statutes unjust to labor or capital and not representing reflection and conviction, or statutes which are fairly certain to be incapable of enforcement and to bring the administration of the law into contempt. We shall be tempted to hesitate and temporize concerning things demanding prompt and courageous action for the public welfare. Again and again we shall stand perplexed in which direction to go when we shall have come to the cross-roads of public duty and mere party expediency or even self-interest; our way will be so shut in by doubt that we shall hesitate even as to a single step forward and upward. But there is one thing above all things to which we may cling with a certain faith—that so long as we keep ourselves a covenant to return to and abide by the principles of Washington's Farewell Address; so long as his character shall be remembered and revered by us, so long as we shall set his life and his devotion before us as the best type and example of American citizenship to admire and emulate, this country cannot falter in true progress nor in the end come short of its high mission in the world. For then, during all times to come, we shall have for our political guidance as a people the inspiration of his presence, which will be to us what, for the moral guidance of men, the Word of the Lord was to the Psalmist of old—a lamp unto the feet and a light unto the path."

COMPOUND ADVERTISING

Cumulative Benefits Not Attained by "Hit and Miss" Methods.
(By F. B. Nye.)
Advertising does not have to rely upon the exceptional for its fulfillment. The exceptional happens when advertising is not fruitful. This wonderful business force has been likened to the dripping of water that wears away the stone. Sometimes, advertising, because of the enormous volume employed, may be more accurately likened to the flow of Niagara. In such cases, tremendous industrial works are performed over night. As a rule, however, the mills of advertising compounds, accumulates, pyramids—and it doesn't take 1,900 years to make good, either.

As one of America's best-known merchants says:
The first appearance of an ad may merely cause a ripple.
The second trip it is seen.
The third trip we note the illustration.
The fourth time we read the catch-line.
The fifth time the first paragraph is perused.
The sixth time we complete the reading.
The seventh time it sets us to thinking seriously.
The eighth time we are convinced.
The ninth time, we desire.
The tenth time, having perhaps in the meantime felt a need for the article, we buy.
Meal time appeals to most men more strongly than salvation.

ELKS TO HOLD CONVENTION

Annual Convention Will Be Held At New Bern

New Bern, Feb. 23.—The North Carolina Association of the Benevolent and Protective Order of the Elks will hold its convention at New Bern, N. C., March 13, 14, and 15. Every arrangement has been made to give the boys a big time and every Elk in the state is extended a cordial invitation to be the guest of New Bern Lodge, No. 764, on this occasion.

The occasion marks the 10th anniversary of the New Bern lodge and the event will be celebrated in a manner that will live long in the memory of those who attend. No stone shall be left unturned to make this the greatest event in the history of North Carolina Elksdom. The active co-operation of each individual member is needed in order to insure the success of this re-union. Every Elk in the state of North Carolina, who can possibly do so, is asked to grace the occasion with his presence.

The program will be as follows:
Wednesday evening, March 13th, at 8 p. m., opening session by association; address of welcome by Mayor C. J. McCarthy, and Exalted Ruler William Dunn, Jr., of the New Bern lodge; responses by District Deputy Witherspoon; President Branham, of the state association, and Exalted Ruler of visiting lodges, Ex-Lieut. Gov. Francis D. Winston has been invited to be the orator of the evening. Luncheon will follow.
Thursday morning, March 14th, at 10 a. m., business meeting of the state association. Thursday afternoon, March 14th, at 3 p. m., parade in which all Elk lodges are invited to participate. A silver loving cup will be awarded to the lodge having the largest number in line and making the best showing. This cup is to be known as the New Bern 10th Anniversary Cup, and is Indian Killed on Track.

Near Rochelle, Ill., an Indian went to sleep on a railroad track and was killed by the fast express. He paid for his carelessness with his life. Often it's that way when people neglect coughs and colds. Don't risk your life when prompt use of Dr. King's New Discovery will cure them and so prevent a dangerous throat or lung trouble. "It completely cured me, in a short time, of a terrible cough that followed a severe attack of Grip," writes J. R. Watts, Floydada, Tex., "and I regained 15 pounds in weight that I had lost." Quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. 50c. and $1. Trial bottle free at King-Crowell Drug Co.

New Japanese Ambassador Arrives.
