COTTON STOCKS GRAIN PROVISIONS

New York Cotton Letter. New York, March 29.—The market has shown the same general character again today.

London advices were hopeful of an early settlement of English coal strike and wage disputes in New Bedford have been adjusted, but the market is still more or less exercised over the disputes in the domestic coal fields and there can be little doubt that there has been very extensive reduction in long lines during the week.

DEAD MAN A STRANGER

Body Shipped Across Continent Through a Mistake in Identity. Parkersburg, W. Va., March 29.—Relatives went today to the rooms of a local undertaker to view the remains of William P. Foy, telegraph operator, who was reported to have died on a train near Provo, Utah, and whose body had been shipped home for burial. Not only were the remains not those of Foy, but they were those of a man who bore not the slightest resemblance to him.

No one is able to explain the mystery, except that in some way there has been a mistake in identity. While the discovery was a great relief to the relatives of Foy, it leaves the undertaker in a dilemma. He has the body, shipped across the continent, on his hands. The Foy family, of course, has abandoned the plans for a funeral, and there is no one else to bear the expense of a burial.

that he does not run from a fight. He said he could furnish the reasons if required. He is not a prohibitionist himself, but believes in law enforcement, and as solicitor proposes to do his full duty by the people of the state.

"There are conditions surrounding this court," said Solicitor Norris, "that make it impossible for the state to get a fair trial. I did not want to make a request to continue, and this is the first time I have ever insisted on this course, but Silas Edwards is here on appeal from the police court, where he was convicted of selling liquor, and he can renew his bond without a hardship to himself." All he wanted, Solicitor Norris said, was a fair hand, and if Edwards was acquitted fairly, the solicitor would not complain.

Wanted Particulars.

Mr. W. B. Jones interrupted at this point to say that he did not know what the solicitor was referring to, but supposed he had reference to the jury. His client, Mr. Jones said, insisted on trial and he knew no valid reason for continuance. Mr. Armistead Jones spoke along the same lines, adding that the court could send out and get another set of jurors.

As to Fair Trial.

"I don't think the state can get a fair trial," Solicitor Norris repeated. "I have information that I believe is reliable that this man Edwards is a notorious blind tiger. In evidence developed in this court it was shown that liquor was found in the safe in Edwards' store when that store was robbed some time ago. One of the Edwards boys served a term on the roads for selling liquor. Edwards has a federal retail liquor license in his possession."

Blind Tigers.

"The reason I did not want to have the case set for today or any particular day was that I did not want to have blind tigers and their sympathizers pack this courthouse. On the jury panel there are men who do not believe in prohibition and are biased. They are as good men in other respects as any of us; they are not corrupt, but biased. I am not criticizing them. The defense has all the advantage in selecting the jury. Edwards appealed from the courthouse in the hope that a Wake county jury would find him not guilty of selling liquor."

Sympathizers On Jury.

Solicitor Norris said he believed the counsel for the defense would get men on the jury who would not convict. He had every reason to believe that the jury is biased against the prohibition law, and the state would go into the case under such conditions defeated at the outset. The solicitor said there was not a man in the courthouse who did not know the difficulty of getting a fair jury.

"Silas Edwards has a federal retail liquor dealer's license, comes from a family of means, and his place has been an eye-sore to this community, and the people want to see it go. There is no occasion for a great array of witnesses from Zebulon. If Edwards is a man of character, he should prove it by reputable people who live here where he does business."

Thought it Remarkable.

Mr. Armistead Jones, replying, thought the solicitor's speech rather remarkable. He personally did not know any blind tigers or sympathizers sitting about the court room. Mr. Jones said he was solicitor for ten years and had never seen the solicitor and jury stormed by blind tigers and their sympathizers.

Prohibition.

"You never had such conditions," Solicitor Norris interrupted. "Yes we did, but I voted against prohibition and you voted for it." "For that reason," the solicitor replied, "I am better able to see the error of that vote." Before this statement, Mr. Norris had said that the dispensary was preferable to present conditions.

Trouth Jury Good.

Mr. Jones thought the jury was a good-looking set of men, and declared there was no foundation for the charge that he was so shrewd as to have the case set for today in the hope of getting a benefit. In defense of his client, Mr. Jones went on to say that the array of witnesses from Zebulon was not to prove the character of Edwards, but was to show that the character of a state's witness—he did not name him—was bad and unworthy of belief.

Has Character.

Solicitor Norris informed the court that the witness whom Mr. Jones was denouncing had as good men as there are in this county to prove his good character. The defense of Edwards in the police court, the solicitor declared, "was an alibi. That alibi was 'busted' all to pieces, and they come here now and try to break a man's character. Edwards lives in this city, and it will work no hardship on him to have the case continued."

Judge Webb Speaks.

"It is very evident to my mind," commented Judge Webb, "that this case ought not to be tried in the Washington, March 29.—Democratic Leader Underwood announced to the house if the senate should pass the tariff revision measures already pending there, and the wool bill which the house soon will send over, the house ways and means committee would bring in bill to revise the cotton tariff schedule, but if there was no such prospect in the senate it would be futile to bring in any more tariff bills.
