

NEW BUILDING THROWN OPEN

Three Services Held In New Building
Yesterday in Presence of Large Congregation

SOME OF THE EVENTS

At Morning Service Dr. Dred Peacock Delivers Address and About $4,000 is Raised on Building Fund—In Afternoon Greetings Are Extended by Representatives of Other Churches—At Night Rev. Leslie P. Howard, of Rocky Mount, Preaches.

The new Sunday school building of Edenton Street Methodist church was thrown open yesterday for the first time and three large congregations were present to witness the exercises. This building, the most modern in the state, will cost about $31,000, and of this amount $14,000 had been paid by Sunday, when $4,000 more was secured on the fund. Exercises were held in the morning, in the afternoon and at night. At the morning service the ad-had ever known. Every one of her children was inspired by this woman and each rose to fame. Napoleon stated contributions amounting to himself being beyond all question the greatest man of modern times.

dress was delivered by Dr. Dred Peacock, of High Point. During this service diplomas were presented to the graduates of the primary department, welcome was extended by Worth Bagley Daniels, and "What the Sunday School Meant to One Class" was told by Mr. Clifton Beckwith. Representatives of two other classes, Prof. W. C. Norton, Baraga and Mrs. H. E. Satterfield, Philadelphia, told what was being done. Mrs. V. Royster talked on "The Home Department," and Miss Susan P. Iden read a synopsis of her excellent and comprehensive history of the Sunday school.

The music was unusually good, and every number was enjoyed from the song of the primary department to the chorus by students from the blind institution. The orchestra, led by Mr. Wright, was very fine.

Dr. Peacock Talks.
Dr. Dred Peacock, of High Point, humorously depicted the Sunday feelingly by the story of two southern boys who stepped aside that they might give an education. Year after year when this man, who wrote a book, he dedicated it to his brothers, who had made it possible for him to achieve fame.

In Wayne county, this state, there were two brothers. One stayed on the farm and the other went to the University. He made a great lawyer and added honor to every office he adorned and his four years as governor were made memorable by the campaign he started for the whole people. In sea-on and out of season he never failed to preach, and though he never occupied a chair in a college, he was the state's greatest teacher, and he died while teaching in a different state.

"And this morning," declared the speaker, "I every child in this land brought a message of hope, would lay one little blossom on his grave."

and he was proud of it. The greetings from the Episcopalian neighbors was brought by Col. Fred A. Olds, and as the man who shows Raleigh to visitors he declared he would not forget about this building. Col. Olds especially commended the normal department of the Sunday school.

Mr. C. H. Stephenson, superintendent of the Christian Sunday school, declared this was his first day of speech making but he was happy to bring the greetings from the nearest neighbor.

Mr. E. B. Crow, who like "Burr Rabbit" had been born and bred in the "briar patch" but in the Presbyterian church gave seven points that characterize an ideal Sunday school, the first two he declared Edenton street Sunday school already possessed and he hoped that they did the others also: ideal equipment, an ideal superintendent, all present on time, a Bible in hand, a liberal contribution, a well studied lesson and a mind to learn.

The last greeting was from Mr. N. B. Broughton, the live superintendent of the Tabernacle church, and the man, whom Mr. Brown declared was known whether at home, in Boston, or Jerusalem, as "the Sunday school man."

Mr. Broughton's greeting was very heartily expressed. He recalled his boyhood days and the union Sunday school picnics, telling an amusing incident of the little boy who was greedily clutching for two handfuls of cake and when reproved his mother exclaimed: "Eat just as much cake as you want to, John William, you belong to the big Methodist Sunday school!" Mr. Broughton wished she could see the "big Methodist Sunday school" of today. He declared he had seen a good many of the best buildings in the country, but he had never seen a better building for Sunday school work, and he was proud of it.

The members of the Sunday school and church and many visitors of other denominations met again at eight o'clock in the Sunday school auditorium, to conclude a day that had been so full of interest, and one on which even the weather had smiled in brightest favor.

Rev. H. M. North, the pastor, said that for the closing message of the day they were to have Rev. Leslie P. Howard, pastor of the Methodist church of Rocky Mount, and while this was not saying that they were saving the best for the last, those who listened to his magnificent sermon, a message of hope and faith and high ideals, felt lifted and inspired and felt that this was indeed a fitting message to have at the close of such an eventful day.

His text was Gen. 28:12-14, the heavenly vision that came to Jacob. Surely this must be a place he declared when men must dream dreams and see visions and go into the world and find the vision and dream to be the real thing. In he would sleep tonight amid a wilderness of flowers. I am glad they are going to build a monument to Charles Brantley Aycock—though he does not need it—but let it rise until it meets the heavens. He first taught that the ragged child is worth more than all the railroads and cotton mills. Let the monument rise, but let us not forget to place forgetmenots on the grave of that elder brother who stepped aside."

Other Talks.
Supt. Joseph G. Brown and Pastor North made a few appropriate remarks and then those present were schools of the time he and many of the older members of Edenton Street were boys and girls, and enumerated some of the essentials to successful teaching. As showing how necessary good teachers are he pointed out the fact that from 80 to 90 per cent. of the members of the church are also members of the Sunday school, the school being the church's greatest work of conservation. The greatest trouble with Sunday schools is the lack of inspired teachers. The mother of Napoleon, though left a widow with eight children, was one of the greatest teachers the world

CLOSE OF REVIVAL

Seventy Conversions in Central Church Meeting.

The revival meeting which has been in progress at Central Methodist church, during the past two weeks, came to a close last night. The meeting has been a wonderful one, reaching far beyond the bounds of Central church. There have been 70 conversions as the result of the splendid sermons of the pastor, Rev. A. D. Wilcox, and the songs of Mr. Frank Fitzgerald.

The meeting closed with one of the best services of the whole series, the house was packed last night. There were 10 professions yesterday.

SCHOOL CLOSING

Picnic at Dutchman's School, Swift Creek Township, Saturday. Dutchman's school, Swift Creek township closed Saturday. There were exercises by the pupils, an address, and Bible presentation by the Junior Order. Mr. Z. V. Idd made a address, and Mr. Jackson conducted the Junior Order exercises. At night Mr. L. Sears, of Apex spoke. The exercises by the students were very good. Miss Nancy N. Watkins is principal of the school, with Miss Bessie I. Sprinkle, assistant and Miss Mary Taylor primary teacher.

LITTLE DOING TODAY IN SUPERIOR COURT.

A compromise judgment was entered in Wake superior court today in the case of Miss Mary Olivia Dunn against the Seaboard Air Line, the amount of damages compromised on being $200. Miss Dunn sued for $2,500.

Judgment was drawn in the Tant case and an appeal was taken to the supreme court.

No cases of importance were tried today.

FOURTEEN PERSONS HELD FOR BURNING SCHOOLS.

The insurance department has been advised that the department's agent, Capt. F. M. Jordan, secured indictments by the grand jury of 14 parties in Polk county for burning two school-houses. A community wrangle over the location of the buildings was the cause of the lawlessness.

Fayetteville Street Baptist Church

The pastor, Rev. F. D. King, spoke to a large congregation at the service last night. Several joined the church after the sermon. Fifty-one persons have joined the church since the meeting, and others will probably join the church soon. The meeting closed with the service last night. A prayer meeting will be held tonight at the residence of Mr. Lane, corner Lenoir and West street. Another prayer meeting will be held at the mission at Mrs. World's on Thursday night.

Miss Annie Lane Deveraux.

Miss Annie Lane Deveraux passed away at her residence on North Person street at 2:30 this morning. The funeral will be held from Christ church tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.
