Is Friday an Unlucky Day?

There are many people who believe that Friday is an unlucky day. It has certainly proved so to the French, as a few facts will demonstrate. It was at 1:50 p. m., on Friday, July 15, 1870, that the Corps Legislatif of France declared war against black hair, and weighs about 175 pounds. Prussia, with the approval of the people, against the madness of the popular acclamations. On the next Friday the Emperor of the French prepared to leave for the front, after a reception of the Chambers, at which the President, in an address, threw the responsibility of the war on Prussia. On the next Friday, the 29th, Napoleon, having arrived at Metz on the previous afternoon, took command of the army, amid the enthusiastic cheering, vivus, and other loyal demonstrations of his troops, established his imperial headquarters and issued his proclamation to the army, closing with the words: "The eves of the universe are upon you. Upon our success depends the fate of liberty and civilization." In the next week the solitary victory of Saarbruck was fel owed by the disasters of Weissenburg and Woerth. On Friday, the 19th, the bombardment of Strasbourg began. On the next Friday, the Prince imperial was huried away to a place of safety, and on Friday, September 2d, Sedan surrend re', Napoleon's imperial power was broken, and the empire was dissolved. On Friday, the 16th, the French Provisional government raised the blockade of the German ports. On Friday, September 23d, Toual capitulated. and on Friday, the 28th of Cetober, the people of Paris were stunned by the first official announcement of their greatest misfortune-the surrender of Metz, although it had taken place on Wednesday, and was previously known in England and America. On Fridays, also, took place the battles of Longueville, the sortie of Bazaine from Metz, and the first battle before Paris, in each of which the French were defeated. As if all these were not enough to make the French believe that Friday is indeed a fatal day for them, the terms for the surrender of their capi- OLD STOVES of all kinds taken in EXCHANGE tal itself were conclude l on Friday, January 27th. None can refrain from hoping, ands the Pittsburgh Commercial, that the fail of Paris may be the last black Friday France shall know for years, and that with the blessing of peace all the ravages of war may be speedily repaired.
