SPEECH OF HENRY W. MILLER, ESQ., AT OXFORD, NOV. 5TH, 1850, In reply to Hon. A. W. Venable.

I come now, Fellow Citizens, to that measure which more than any other, was demanded by the interests and situation of the South.
I refer to the Fugitive Slave law. It was our right,—a right secured to us by the Constitution,—a right which had it not been fe-cured, that constitution never would have been adopted,—this Union never would have been found! Thirty millions of dollars value of slave property had escaped to the North.
The act of 1793 had become a dead letter upon the Statute book. It was necessary that vitality should be given to the provision of the Constitution securing our slave property. The law was passed to accomplish that end. It is a stringent law, but it is a just law, it is a constitutional law. We have a right to require that it be strictly observed, to demand of the Government, that it be enforced, enforced every where, under all circumstances, and against whatever of fanaticism and insubordination may be brought to oppose it. My firm conviction is, that if it be repealed, nullified, rendered futile, worthless, by the unwillingness or inefficiency of the Government to enforce it, against the reckless spirit and lawless purposes of fanaticism, THIS UNION CANNOT STAND!— He, who, as President, approves a bill repealing that law, will in effect, repeal the constitution and by that act will, in my humble opinion, sign the death warrant of the Union.
What! To have the whole body of the free States re-opened as a vast reservoir—harbor for fugitive slaves! A legislative inducement, premium, held out, by such repeal, to deprive us of our property, weaken our political power in the confederacy, and increase the number of spies from our domestic hearths, who can add to the facilities for sending back upon us the firebrands of fanaticism!
If the people of the North, forgetting all the ties of blood, all the sympathies for their own race and kindred, can thus jeopardize our peace, and violate our rights, social and political, under a heedless and infuriated sympathy for the African race, upon their heads will rest the curse of rendering asunder this Union! If they love that race better than their own race, than their own kindred and blood, bound to them by the sacred ties of marriage and of birth, by all the endearments of sacred relations, then indeed, are they no longer worthy our confidence, respect or affection; they will have become in heart enemies and aliens, and will be no longer friends and countrymen!

I hope for better things. I believe the law will be enforced. I have no fears that under this administration it will be repealed.
The triumph of the gallant DOUGLASS at Chicago—the bold and fearless tone of DICKIN-SON, WEBSTER, GRIER and other patriots at the North—the vast assemblage of the friends of law and the Union at New York—the uncompromising spirit there exhibited by Whigs and Democrats—the calls for other meetings to rebuke the lawless spirit which prevails, the firm and decided character of our National Administration—all give assurance, though here and there insubordination may gain a temporary ascendancy, that the law will be enforced, and the friends of the Constitution will triumph! At least let us give them time to rise up under the weight of fanaticism which is pressing upon them and God grant that they may pass unscathed through the fiery ordeal!

The gentleman has expressed the opinion that the law will not be enforced—that it will be repealed, and he couples with it, the emphatic and unqualified charge "that the present administration is an abolition administration." I meet the charge at the threshold, and pronounce it, to use no harsher term, an unjust imputation upon as highminded and patriotic men as ever held office under this Government! Pray, who are these abolitionists? There is WILLIAM A. GRAHAM, known to you all, often honored by your State, respected by you all, reared in your midst, with like prejudices and sympathies with yourselves, a firm man, an incorruptible patriot—a charge or insultation, that he is tainted with abolitionism, that a single throb of his heart beats in unison with that fanatical faction, deserves the scorn of every man who honors the character of the State, be he Whig or be he Democrat! (Here Mr. V. disavowed any personal reflection upon Gov. G.) Ah! the gentleman made no exception. His charge was a sweeping one. But how stands it, pray, as to the other members of the Cabinet? CON-RAD, of Louisiana, and STUART of Virginia, slave owners, respected and honored by their people—can any sane man believe the charge true as to them? Aye, and JOHN J. CRITTENDEN—the able jurist—the accomplished debater—with as generous a heart as ever beat and as resolute a spirit as ever moved—a man, who would have done honor
