NEW FALL AND WINTER GOODS

FOR 1850.

Fresh Arrivals from the Latest Importations!

THOMAS R. FENTRESS, MERCHANT TAYLOR, RALEIGH, N. C. ONE DOOR ABOVE THE POST OFFICE.

THE Subscriber respectfully announces to his friends and patrons—to the members of the Legislature—and to strangers visiting the City, that he continues to carry on the Tailoring Business in all its branches at his old stand, where he shall be happy to see them and sell them great bargains. The subscriber had deemed it unnecessary recently to advertise his business, as he was so well known throughout the State; but for fear his old friends and customers might be under the impression that he was carried away by the great 'tornado' which passed Northwards a few days ago, he has thought it best to inform them that he is still in business and hopes they will give him a call. He would say to old friends and customers that the liberal patronage he has received since he has been here, has cemented him still more closely to the good old State of North Carolina; and he trusts that their patronage will continue to be bestowed on one who feels he kindly appreciates it; and for his part there shall be nothing lacking to give entire satisfaction. He might say more, but it is sufficient for him to say that he has the feelings of a North Carolinian. He is permanently located here—his interests are here—and here he expects to live and die.

The Subscriber is a friend and well-wisher to all mechanical business in the 'Old North State.' He thinks it the duty of our people to encourage our own hard-working mechanics, and keep them with us, and not drive them from our borders by encouraging manufacturers at a distance from us. We may wish for good times and State improvements, but we will never see them until we come to depend on our own mechanics, on home manufactures and home industry. When we come to do this then will we see our Cities and Towns flourishing; and our means will not be sent off to the 'great City' of New York or Boston for articles that can be made in this State as well as at either of these places, and on as good terms.

The Subscriber has on hand a beautiful assortment of GOODS, selected by himself in person in the Northern Markets, of the latest and most approved styles and patterns. His Goods were purchased this Fall, and are entirely new. They were bought on as good terms as those of any House in this City; and he flatters himself that he can offer as liberal if not better bargains than any other Establishment in this City or in the United States. Call and examine for yourselves. You must be your own judges, and you will find this no mere 'puff.' The Subscriber considers it unnecessary to say any thing about the skill in cutting or making, as his business is conducted by himself; and he will leave it to those who deal with him to judge of his capacity in this respect. His experience in business is such, and he has been so long before the public, that he will not stoop to commend his own skill and attainments. He leaves it to his friends and customers to judge of his superiority over many who presume to call themselves Tailors, or Cutters, or 'Artists'—if you please. His workmen cannot be surpassed by any, North or South, and he invites the public to call and try him before purchasing elsewhere. He pledges his word for good bargains, as he is determined to sell low.

His Stock comprises every article kept in similar Establishments. There is nothing you may call for which you cannot get. Call and try the well known Establishment, one door North of the Post Office.

The Subscriber's Stock comprises the Super black French Cloths and Cassimers—plain and doeskin, of all qualities and prices, and a splendid assortment of fancy Cloth, which for colors and quality cannot be surpassed. Also, a beautiful lot of plain black Satin Vestings, and a superb article of fancy F.o.c. ch Silk and Satins for parties, with a choice variety of fancy Cassimers for winter wear, and a very large lot of fancy French Cassimers, which will be disposed of on a very small advance. Also, a general assortment of fancy articles, consisting of lamb's wool, merino and silk Under shirts and Drawers—Dress Shirts, black and white kid, merino, and fancy cassimere Gloves—Half hose, cotton and merino—black and fancy silk Cravats; all of which are offered at uncommonly low prices. Also, a beautiful lot of READY-MADE CLOTHING, made in my own House, and which will be disposed of at the most reasonable prices.

Call and examine for yourselves.

N. B. Orders from a distance will be thankfully received and promptly attended to. The London and Paris Fashions regularly received.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

We sat down to the perusal of the first Annual Message of President FILLMORE (which in our last we placed before our readers) with the intention of enabling ourselves to present such views of its leading passages as might occur to us. But we confess ourselves at a loss to find in the Message any thing which it is in our wit to improve, or which it would not be presumption in us to attempt to enforce or amplify. The message is so plain indeed, that he who runs may read, and comprehend its contents. It expounds itself, and requires no interpretation.

We shall confine ourselves, therefore, for to-day at least, to a few observations on the general character of this very able State Paper.

The first thing about the Message which must strike most readers, is its commendable brevity, compared with many of the labored annual communications of preceding Presidents. With similar materials before them, some of his predecessors, whom to name would perhaps be deemed invidious, would have spun out a tissue which would, instead of six, have covered sixteen columns of the National Intelligencer. But the President has compressed into a comparatively small space all the information regarding public affairs, all expositions of principles, and all recommendations of particular legislation, which seemed requisite and proper; yet all with a perspicuity and distinctness which leave no room for either doubt or misapprehension. In these respects, as well as in the soundness of its doctrines and its tone of dignified moderation, it deserves to rank with the best (the latest) of the Messages of that great mediæval American statesman, President MADISON.

The parts of the Message which particularly attract our admiration are, that which inculcates the application to the functions and the duties of this Government of those great moral principles which are taught to individual man, as well by divine authority as by the promptings of uncorrupt nature, and the wisdom of ages. We are proud to find, for example, in the Message, such noble sentiments as the following:

"The great law of morality ought to have a national as well as a personal and individual application. WE SHOULD ACT TOWARDS OTHER NATIONS AS WE WISH THEM TO ACT TOWARDS US; and justice and conscience should form the rule of conduct between Governments, instead of mere power, self-interest, or the desire of aggrandizement."

In the same vein is, from beginning to end, the whole of that part of the Message which concerns our Foreign Relations; worthy of all praise, and auguring a continuance of our existing friendly relations with the whole world.

And, secondly, what the President says of the most important point in the domestic concerns of the Union is so entirely in accord with what we have always and repeatedly endeavored to impress upon our readers, that it would be strange indeed did it not command our entire concurrence, and along with it, our respect for the moral courage with which the President has met the question. Referring to the series of measures passed at the last session of Congress with the view of healing the sectional differences which had sprung from the Slavery and Territorial questions, "I believe those measures," says the President "to have been required by the circumstances and condition of the country. I believe they were necessary to allay asperities and animosities that were rapidly alienating one section of the country from another, and destroying those fraternal sentiments which are the strongest supports of the Constitution." Regarding these measures as "a settlement, in principle and in substance—a FINAL SETTLEMENT of the dangerous and exciting subjects which they embraced"—for this reason, he adds, "I recommend your adherence to the adjustment established by those measures, until time and experience shall demonstrate the necessity of further legislation to guard against evasion or abuse."

No one can doubt, who reads in connexion the passages of the Message which bear upon this object, the fixed determination of the President not only to take care that the laws enacted on the subject shall be faithfully executed, but to hold on to them, with all his might, and with all his constitutional authority, as the sheet anchor of the national peace and safety. In this patriotic purpose let all true patriots stand by him!

The recommendations in the message all speak for themselves, and will, we believe, almost universally command the public approbation.
