THE VERMONT NULLIFICATION ACT.

The Vermont Union Whig has the subjoined statement of the manner in which the act for nullifying the fugitive law passed the Legislature of Vermont. The facts here stated, and the remarks of the Union Whig and other papers, leave little doubt that the proceeding, in the Vermont Legislature, by which this act passed, was the result of a gross trick and imposition on the part of certain individuals, and that it will meet with no general sanction from the community. It is certain that the proceeding meets with as decided disapprobation in Vermont and other States of New England, as any where else. The Boston Courier rightly characterizes the act as "foolish," and with many justice says:

"It will be difficult to make the people of the South believe the New England States are desirous of preserving the Union, if the conduct of the Vermont Nullifiers receive any countenance or support here."

The following are the remarks of the Vermont Union Whig:

The Legislature of our hitherto much-respected State passed an act at its last session, intended by the mover to over rule the law of Congress respecting fugitives from labor. We have refrained from all allusion to this most unfortunate enactment, from mere chagrin and shame. It was whirled through the two Houses on the last day of the session, in the tempest of legislation which was concentrated into the closing hours—passed the several formalities of law-making without notice or remark. It is not strictly true to say that it was "ill-considered," for in strictest truth it was not considered at all.

For the substance and scope of the law no defence or excuse can be made. It attempts to repeal certain portions of the late law of Congress, IN TERMS; and instructs certain State officers and magistrates to treat that law, as to such portions of it, with utter disregard. This is not the treatment which the dignity or self-respect of Vermont should lead her to bestow upon the legislation of Congress. If the laws of Congress are unwise, or even unconstitutional, it is not for Vermont or any other State to nullify or repeal them. We have placed ourselves by this act in a position in which we have no defence against the judgment of the whole country. We were "thrice armed" when we "had our quarrel just." Why did we throw away our strength? The influence of Vermont was by no means inconsiderable upon this very subject of slavery. As a constitutional and conservative opponent of that evil institution, she was strong—as a pettish nullifier of the Constitution and the laws, she will become weak and contemptible indeed. In every view the passage of this act is deplorable.

The severity of condemnation which this mistep has drawn upon our State, from quarters where a wise man would be proudest of approval, is most painful to us. We had indulged the hope (a somewhat fond one we confess) that the act would sink at once into its appropriate oblivion. We encouraged that oblivion by the charity of our silence. The hope was a vain one. Let us be MILD for the present on South Carolina.
