FOURTH OF JULY.

Chatham, July 10, 1801.

ON Saturday last, assembled at Mr. James Gaines's on Rocky River, about twenty-five citizens of the vicinity. for the purpose of celebrating the Anniversary of American Independence—a day too dear to them to pass unnoticed.

ADDRESSES.

Friends and Fellow-Citizens, We have met this day to commemorate one of the most important eras that has taken place since the beginning of time, viz. the 4th of July, 1776—the day our Independence was declared—that memorable period on which the brave, enlightened and patriotic sons of America boldly proclaimed their natural right to Freedom and Equality, and pledged themselves to each other, in the terms just now read to you, that "they would be free and independent, or die in the attempt."

Wherefore, in consequence of this declaration, the arbitrary and tyrannical King of Great-Britain became still more and more determined to reduce the then thirteen United States to their former obedience and submission to his Government, sent over sea large fleets and armies of hired mercenaries, who, with relentless cruelty and savage barbarity, commenced a horrid war all over the Union, which continued near eight tedious years, to the destruction of the lives and immense property of thousands of our good citizens, who were then sacrificing their all in defence of freedom and their country's cause; nor did the continued ravage, and savage barbarity of those veterans, deter the brave and resolute sons of Freedom from persevering in their spirited resistance against the lawless tyrants of Britain; until at length, thro' the unceasing bravery of our army, and the manly fortitude of our citizens, it pleased Providence to crown us with a complete victory, by delivering into our hands our invaders, by which means the haughty King and Parliament of Great-Britain were obliged to acknowledge the United States exonerated from their former allegiance and dependence, and that they be free and independent, with equal right to govern themselves according to their own jurisprudence.

the restraint of their natural, civil and religious liberties, which induced them to leave their native soil, encounter the dangers of the ocean, and seek an asylum among the Savages of the then wilds of this country, where they might enjoy, uninterrupted, those civil and religious privileges, which they considered as the natural and equal rights of every individual.

Again, I say, what great reason we have to rejoice, when we contemplate the rise of a great Empire, grown out of a few dependant Provinces, and emanating towards the perfection of human attainment, by having established a Government, whose foundation is natural and equal right, whose structure is justice and moderation, and whose aim is to promote the general good of all.

Therefore, fellow-citizens, as it has pleased Providence to bless us with so wise and good a Constitution or form of Government, let us be careful and vigilant, lest innovation creep unawares upon us; as there is still a large body of men among us who are not well satisfied under our Republican system of Government, and who, ever since the Revolution, have industriously strove to transform it; as near as possible, to that of the British Aristocracy and Monarchy; and thereby deprive the emancipated Americans of their dear-bought rights and privileges.

Another great cause for rejoicing is, our success in electing a truly Republican President, in whom we may safely trust the helm of Government, and whose skill and integrity have been well proved.

One more cause of our rejoicing is, that we are placed in a land of plenty, where neither famine nor want has ever yet been felt. We are in the full enjoyment of peace and plenty; not only so, but exporting a large surplus of our produce to almost all parts of the world, and that in our own ships, and by our own merchants, who, in return, receive the riches of almost all parts of the Eastern World.

Now, fellow-citizens, after taking a view of those many blessings which have redounded to us, chiefly in consequence of our independence, have we not great reason to thank Providence for so large a share of its benignity? And ought we not, with the most sincere love and gratitude in our hearts and minds, endeavour to cultivate a strict observance of all the moral and social duties of life; thereby to merit a continuance of those national and special favours which it hath pleased the Almighty Ruler of all to bestow.

Therefore, with joy and gratitude in our hearts, let us thank Heaven, and enjoy the good things provided on this occasion, in social and brotherly love, and in goodwill and friendship with each other, so that this day may conclude to the pleasure and satisfaction of every one present, and to the honour and credit of the Republican name.
