ANECDOTE OF WASHINGTON.

In 1754, he was stationed at Alexandria with his regiment, the only one in the colony and of which he was Colonel. There happened at that time to be an election in Alexandria for members of the assembly, and the ballot ran high between Col. George Fairfax and Mr. William Elzey. Washington was on the side of Fairfax, and a Mr. William Payne headed the friends of Elzey. In the course of the contest, Washington grew very warm (for his passions, naturally, were terrible; though a wife regard to duty, i. e. honour and happiness, soon reduced them under proper command) and unluckily said something that offended Mr. Payne, who, though but a cub in size was a lion in heart, elevated his shalalah, and at a blow extended our hero on the ground. News was soon carried to his regiment that their Colonel was murdered by the mob! On the passions of soldiers who doated on their commander, such a report fell at once like a flash of lightning on a magazine of gunpowder. In a moment, the whole regiment was under arms, and in rapid motion towards the town, burning for vengeance. During this time Washington had been liberally plied with cold water, acids, and volatiles; and, happily for Mr. Payne and his party, was so far recovered as to go out and meet his enraged soldiers, who crowded around him with faces of honest joy to see him alive again. After thanking them for such an attachment to him, he assured them that he was not hurt in the least, and begged them, by their love of him and of their duty, to return peacefully to their barracks. As for himself, he went to his room generously chastising his passion, which had thus struck out a spark that had like to have thrown the whole town into a flame. And feeling himself the aggressor of Mr. Payne he resolved to make him the honourable reparation of asking his pardon. No sooner had he made this heroic resolution, than recovering that delicious gaiety which ever accompanies good purposes in a virtuous mind, he went to a ball that night, and behaved as pleasantly as though nothing had happened. Early next morning he wrote a polite note of invitation to Mr. Payne, to meet him at the tavern. Payne took it for a challenge, and repaired to the tavern in full expectation of smelling gunpowder. But what was his surprize, on entering the chamber, to see, in lieu of a brace of pistols, a decanter of wine and a pair of glasses on the table. Washington rose to meet him, and offering his hand with a smile, began—" Mr. Payne to err sometimes, is nature, to rectify error, is always glory; I believe I was wrong in the affair of yesterday; you have had I believe some satisfaction, and, if you deem that sufficient, here is my hand let us be friends."

A act of such sublime virtue, produced its proper effect on the mind of Mr. Payne, who from that moment, became the most enthusiastic admirer of Washington; and, for his sake, ready at any time to charge up to a battery of two and forty pounders. Would our Youth but be persuaded to act in a style so correct and so heroic, our papers would no longer shock us with accounts of elegant young men murdering each other, on false principles of honor; and, by one desperate deed, emerging themselves of all present pleasure, and of all future hope. Would they but exert the courage, the only true courage, to stamp into immediate silence the clamours of brutish passion, and to leap at the sacred call of duty, they might long live as good Children, to equal the hopes of their fond parents, as good Citizens, with their virtues to enrich their Country—as good Husbands, to bless the sex they were born to love and protect—and at length like Washington, attain to a good old age, "crown'd with Riches and with Honours." A life how glorious! to his country dear, Her sit in Council, and her sit in war! May his example, all our sons inspire! And from their fathers' history catch his fire.

A Teacher wanted. THE Inhabitants of Raleigh, in North-Carolina, having lately erected a House for an Academy in one of the Squares of the City given to them by the Legislature for the purpose, are desirous of engaging a fit Person to superintend the Institution. If they could meet with a Clergyman of liberal Education and Principles, who would take charge of the Academy and give the citizens a weekly Discourse, such an one would be preferred, and for such a Character, it is believed, a handsome Salary would be provided. Raleigh being the Seat of the State Government, and esteemed a healthy situation, would doubtless prove an agreeable residence for a person of the above description. An Assitant Teacher to initiate young Scholars in Reading, Writing and Accounts, is also wanted. Application to be made, by letter (post-paid) to J. Gates, Raleigh, Secretary to the Board of Trustees. March 10.
