

BRITISH INFLUENCE.

A print in Boston, a vigilant Centinel for the enemy, proverbially vulgar, abusive and malignant against the government of the United States, has become, since the visit of its editor to the British frigate Nymph, doubly zealous in the cause of "the king," and doubly malignant in its attacks on the democracy of the American government.

of any other day, be found, so regardless of personal reputation, or so malicious, or wicked, or so absolutely devoted to the enemy, as to throw even the shadow of a doubt on the veracity of the numerous witnesses who testified to the facts, or on the respectable committee of congress, who made the outrage a national record, and whose report, so far as relates to this subject, is as follows:

THE President of the United States, on the 17th of June, 1814, issued his Proclamation, pardoning all deserters who will deliver themselves up to any officer of the United States Army within three months from the date thereof.

DESSERTERS. The President of the United States, on the 17th of June, 1814, issued his Proclamation, pardoning all deserters who will deliver themselves up to any officer of the United States Army within three months from the date thereof.
