THE REFRESHING RAIN

Long had the sun in Summer's longest days, O'er the dry earth dispens'd bit scorching rays,

Nor show'r, refreshing dew, nur gentle rain Bad fail'n to moisten, o'er the thirsty plan-Sweet vegetation lost its vernal hue-

Nor roses bloom'd, nor lill es rose to view-The birds sit panting in the sultry grove, And swains reluctant from the cottage move :

"He" lowing herds" athirst, now rove the plan

In search of riv'lets, but they rove in vain; The holdest rivers are but purling brooks, Where rills once tinkled nought but sand and nicks

Now meet the eye -A drought, alas! is here! The vales are lonesome and the hills look drear.

When lo! a cloud, a cloud is seen to rise ! It moves majestic up the western skies; Un ether borne, from South to North it spreads. Veile the bright sun & Earth's burnt furface shades. Fresh from the south a heavy wind comes forth. Fog climbs the hills and glides towards the North,

The air is darken'd-loud the thunder roars, The rain in torrents on the mountain pours-Swift see it dash along the plains below, Rills swell to rivers and their banks o'er flow, And rivers rising, till no bounds restrain, Sweep down the vale & deluge all the plain Clailly the fields the drenching show's receive.

Mounta na rejoice & hills the rhomage give -The ' desert sindes"-far lillies spring to V.PW,

The roses bloom-all nature's deck'd anew, The lowing herds, for drink no longer roam; Sweins dance f r jov, as they from labor come; Hirds in the grove, resume their wonted songs, And praises rise from myriads of tongues.
