GOD IS GOOD.

God is good! Each perfumed flower, The smiling fields, the dark green wood, The insect chattering for an hour— All things proclaim that God is good.

I hear it in the rushing wind; Hills that have for ages stood, And clouds with gold and silver lined, Are still repeating God is good.

Each little rill that many a year Has the same verdant path pursued, And every bird, in accents clear, Joins in the song that God is good.

The restless main, with haughty roar Calms each wild wave, and billow rude. Retreats submissive from the shore, And swells the chorus, God is good.

Countless hosts of burning stars Sing his praise with light renewed; The rising sun each day declares In rays of glory, God is good.

The moon that walks in brightness says, God is good!—and man, endued With power to speak his Maker's praise, Should still repeat that God is good.

GOD IS LOVE.

The humblest flower that decks the vale— The gloomiest cypress of the grove— The breath of heaven their leaves inhale, And whisper back that "God is love." Streams speak his praises as the flow, And winds soft hallelujahs blow.

"The fashion of the world passeth away."

Reader, thou wilt soon be classed with those who have gone before thee. A new generation will occupy the ground you now tread, and a friendly recollection, or a storied urn, be the only relic of thy busy life. Thy years, at most, are few! Thy hopes, if bounded by time's narrow limits, how visionary! Thy expectations, if circumscribed within life's little bound, how precarious! Thy—but, hold! "man that is in honor abideth not." Look around. Learn from what has been what may be. The tender grass, now merging into luxuriance, doomed by the frosts of the coming winter to fade and die, may open its ephemeral flower when thy head shall be beneath its sod—when the sun of thy mortal life shall be sunk beneath the horizon of time, and thy present possessions know thee no more forever. Thou hast other interests than the fleeting cares of the present world. Here thou art a passenger, not a resident. Thou art identified only with the present moment, and a pilgrim and a sojourner, as all our fathers were. Let not the toys of this world beguile you of the more substantial joys which grow in rich luxuriance, bud and bloom in wisdom's path, and exhale their fragrance at every step. Thou art destined to a world whence the faculties of thy soul, unfettered from the trammels of mortality, and illuminated with the sun of Truth, will explore in rapturous amazement the glories of Goodness, the sublimity of Wisdom, and the fervor of Love.

RELIGION has planted itself, in all the purity of its image, and sufficiency of its strength at the threshold of human misery; and is empowered to recal the wanderers from their pilgrimage of woe and direct them in the path of heaven.—It has diffused a secret joy in the abodes of poverty and wretchedness: it has effaced the wrinkles from the brow of care—shed a gleam of secret and tranquil joy in the chamber of death, gladdened the countenance of the dying with triumphant enthusiasm, and spread throughout the earth a faint foretaste of the blessings of futurity. It is benign as the light of heaven, and comprehensive as its span.—An iris in the sky of the Christian, it quickens perseverance with the promises of reward—re-animates the drooping spirit—invigorates the decrepit age—and directs with a prophetic ken, to the regions of eternal felicity. Like the sun, it guides every object with its rays, without being diminished in its lustre, or shorn of its power.

HONEST LABOR IS HONORABLE.

Among the encouraging prospects, that one nation is destined to lasting prosperity, and to the perpetual enjoyment of liberty and independence, is the increasing honor attached to domestic industry. Comparatively few men are ashamed to be found occupied in any necessary labor; and he is rather an object of scorn, who is seen disdainfully directing others in the accomplishment of his labors, than he whose hands are employed in it.

That imaginary exaltation, which scorns honest industry, has reduced many families to bankruptcy and degradation, and a train of evils, which are calculated to undermine the basis of our government and spread discord and misery in every neighborhood and every family.

He who feels above honest labour, ought to be considered below an honorable station in society; nor ought his misfortunes to bring him within the circle of effectual commiseration until, they have brought him to honest and persevering industry. No man has a right, or title to comfort and respectability, without the sweat of his brow; nor ought I to lift a finger, for raising a man from the troubles of an overwhelming poverty, while he is afraid of staining his fingers with honest labor.

When I see a lady exulting in her freedom from domestic cares and labors, and always ready to run at the bidding of some idle pleasure seeker, thus, glorying in her shame, I know that her home is a wretched dwelling—that although her tongue is smoother than oil, her heart is full of thorns—in her parlor, she is amiable as a goddess, but in her domestic relations, she is fractious as a demon—it would be better to dwell in the corner of a house top, than with her. A lady whose home is pleasant loves to be there: and whoever says, that she has nothing to engage her attention at home, most assuredly leaves something undone there, which ought to be done. That child which is not trained to industry, is trained to guilt and wretchedness. In the abodes of fashionable idleness are found the most refined and the most destructive vices. Happy then, for America, is that gale which begins to blow away the airy notion of exalted idleness.

SPANISH INQUISITION.

In Walsh's Museum for Feb'y, there is a statement extracted from the "History of the Inquisition in Spain," which shews the number of those who suffered as heretics, under the several inquisitors of Spain, from the year 1452 to the year 1808. The whole number of victims is as follows:—

Burnt 31,718 Died before execution, or escaped 17,511 Punished by whipping, imprisonment, &c. 287,522 Total, 336,751 More than 15000 were burnt during the last century, but none after the year 1783. The preceding statement includes only the victims of the inquisition in the Peninsula. Immense numbers suffered in the Spanish possession in America, Italy, Flanders, &c.

The emperor or Napoleon first abolished the inquisition in Spain in 1808, and the general Cortes afterwards declared it incompatible with the constitution. Ferdinand VII. on his return re-established it. The Cortes since the late revolution, have again abolished it, we fervently hope, for ever.

This infernal tribunal which has shed so much innocent blood and occasioned so much misery on earth, was dignified with the title of "Holy Office," and was pretended to be established ad majorem Dei gloriam, for the greater glory of God!

COTTON GINS.

NATHAN G. BLOUNT, at Kinston, in Lenoir county, continues to make Cotton Gins, with every late Improvement. His Plates and Bars are of steel, and these, as well as every material part of the Iron Work, are made by his special order in Philadelphia.

To the many respectable planters and merchants who have had Gins of his manufacture in use for the last two years, he refers, to sustain the claims of his machines, to rank among the best made in this country.

His price is two dollars and fifty cents per Saw for 8 inch, two dollars and sixty cents for 9 inch, and two dollars and seventy cents for Saws of 10 inches diameter, delivered at his shop. Gentlemen favoring him with their orders, shall not be disappointed either as to time or quality.

As his importation of materials will be governed by the orders he receives, he requests that orders intended for him may be early given.

The Libel of Caroline Hall White, wife of William White, late of said Portsmouth, gentleman, against the said William White.

YOUR libellant doth respectfully present and declare, and give this Court to understand, that, on the 14th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1819, she was lawfully married to the said William White, to wit, at said Portsmouth; and your libellant hath ever since, from thence, hitherto conducted herself with fidelity, purity and discretion as the lawful wife of the said William White; nevertheless, the said William White, well knowing the premises, and without cause or fault in your libellant, hath willingly absconded himself from your libellant (so being his lawful wife as aforesaid) for the space of three years now last past, and, during the same, and hitherto, without making suitable provision for her support and maintenance, although the said William White had it in his power so to do. All and singular of which premises were and are true, public and notorious, of which, legal proof being made, your libellant respectfully prays that the bonds of marriage between her and the said William White may be dissolved according to the force and effect of the statute in such case made and provided, and as in right and justice doth appertain.
