Execution .- On Friday last, negro Ned, convicted of the murder of his master, underwent the dreadful sentence of the law. The concourse of persons who attended to witness a fellow-being launched into eter nity, was immense. The wretched crimipal, came from the Jail habited in a long black shroud, and was escorted to the place of execution, by our volunteer Corps of Infantry. We learn from the Reverend Clergy (who were most assiduous in their attentimes,) that after sentence of death he manifested no compunction for past guilt, though blood was upon his soul-no sensi bility of present danger, though his very moments were numbered, and no fear of future retribution, though to him there was but the drop of a gallows between this or, Lieut. Governor, members of the State world and the next. Under the gallows, Legislature, and Representives to Congress, see my own State entirely covered with this 6 weeks, that unless the defendants come forward he exhibited great composure, bordering also took place in Connecticut on the same on indifference. We have more than once, expressed our sentiments, as to the worse than uselessness of public executions, and the recent event is another melancholy proof of how little, moral effect, these legal exhibitions of death are. We were shocked to see numerous parties of females, dressed in their best attire, returning from the tragic scene they had been witnessing, laughing and sauntering carelessly along, perfectly unconscious that they had a few moments 4 to place fresh horses to the coach." before been present, when a soul had been violently separated from its earthly companion, under circumstances the most aw for. We do not tank we have accomplished great things, simply because we can persuade a child to repeat a ong lesson from the book. It is our object to fix the attention on particular facts and to get the pupil to understand the nature of those facts . and this not only in the higher branchs, but in the first elements. In simple Arithmetic, and English Grammar, we commence in this way : and by this method, we gain not only much more rapid progress in the first stages, but what in our opinion is of vastly greater importance, we get the pupile, almost without exception, to be fond of the study in which she is engaged. Study is then not an odious task, but a delightful employment. Nothing is more pleasing to youth than to dicsover the strength of their own powers of understanding. This discovery we endeavor to get them to make, and when the is accomplished we have no fears, but corresponding efforts will be made to bring these powers into exercise. The local situation of this Institution is peculiarly propitious. The healthfulness of the place s extraordinary.
