MESSRS. EDITORS-As the 11th of November is past, I avail myself of your promise, that " your columns shall hereafter assume a more diversified character," and send you a few crude Reflections of mine, which I hope you will publish.

PHILANTHROPOS. In an age when intellect is so active, and so mawalks of life, it is surely of great consequence that right ideas should be entertained respecting the personal behavior of men of genius. To suppose hat extended powers of mind are likely to produce, moral responsibilities, is, in my opinion, an absur- directed by a common sensorium. The more likely event is, that the man of talent is just the more able to appreciate and walk by the best precepts of conduct. It is true that we have some splendid instances of at least the poetifrom affectation. There is not, I feel persuaded, much sin, resulting from real impulse. The most of it is committed in imitation of something which we think fine. One silly fellow thinks it looks fine other silly fellows's imagination is dazzled by the glories of the table; he accordingly drinks-not at all because he likes drink, but because he thinks most of the instances that are pointed out, of mer of talents who have become degraded by their Ishly loosing the name of good citizens, in order to nothing but think, write, and talk. gain-nothing. The fact is, that degraded habits are totally inconsistent with the exercise of the higher mental faculties. Instead of the fancy being burnished, as many suppose, by the use of liquor, it is deadened. Intoxication chains and in general, seems to brighten the hours of converhis blind state, are incoherent and useless, he drops greatest Bear Story that has ever come to my ears.

The story that I am about to relate, is one which has excited a great deal of feeling in the vicinity where it happened, and eves in the direction from which the sound is well worth a conspicuous place in your paper. The facts are these :

The drove consisted of a very gentle old cow and a number peculiar tone of voice, with his significant of young cattle. His mother told him previous to his starting, to keep near the old cow, as she would conduct him on a straight course home. This he was care ful to obey; but shortly after he had en tered the woods on his way home, walk ing by the side of the old cow, he heard a crackling in the bushes, and on looking round what should he see but a large bear making towards him with all the speed and fury that those ferocious animals are possessed of. #### A SUNDAY IN FRANCE.

The following account of a Sunday in France is given by a writer in the Christian Journal, a Glasgow publication:

" In the morning before breakfast, we accompanied him and Mr. Van Buren to walked into the streets (of Paris) and his whole soul was engrossed in the sport to Versailles or St. Cloud, and the towns that was just about taking place. He in the neighborhood of Paris, where replaced himself erect in his stirrups, and creation and amusement is resorted to speaking to the trainer, said-- boy, more on the Sabbath than any other day hold that horse-don't let him run this of the week. Being desirous to ascertain way-you should break him of such tricks how the Sabbath was actually spent there, we resolved to repair to Versailles, where Mr. Peyton, stand here and time-there the French King goes to worship. Havis but one proper place to time-Mr. Van ing resolved on this, a day or two before Buren, get behind me, that horse will run hand, we were obliged to secure a coach,

Having reached Versailles, we found little appearance for a while of his Majesty coming to church-shortly we were told he would be likely to come first to his palace there, and then go to chapel. of attraction was the palace of Buonaparte and the Empress-Josephine; it is open to the public, and servants are BLACK TEAS. - A letter to a gentleman placed in it by Government to exhibit it annual fete or grand fair, which begins on the 6th of September and lasts for three weeks. The 6th of September happened this year to be a Sabbath, but just so much the better for commencing the fair. Accordingly, on our arrival, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, we found at least eight or ten thou-and people collected, some romenading the avenues, some loitering y the fountains-but the great mass engrossed with some kind of active amusement. Conceive a beautiful wood, with an open space in the centre, with tents and booths of every description -here a Ball and there a Concert, Shows and Exhibitions without number, & an immense concourse of well dressed people mixing in the dance, or trying their good fortune at some game of chance, amid the noise of shouting and music, and you may have some conception of the grand fair of St. Cloud. It is generally announced by authority to take place at one of the royal residences, and graciously countenanced by his Majesty as he returns from Chapel in his carriage.

The scene was such as we could have enjoyed at any other time, for the people were all sober, orderly and well behaved -but such was not our idea of the way to spend a Sabbath. We now hastened back to the city, and found the gardens crowded with people, and the shops nearly all shut-most of them, we believe, close about four in the afternoon, for the purpose of getting some recreation. Now, in reality, is all Paris in the streets; the -the public gardens are crowded with loungers, and the music is more splendid than usual. In the garden of the Palais Royal the fountain is playing, and on both sides may be seen crowds rushing into the theatres, which reap a rich harvest on Sabbath evenings; and again smaller parties of two or three desperate characters may be seen passing to and from the legalized gaming-houses, in one of the principal streets, near this spot. Such is the mode of spending a Sabbath in Paris-public amusements, theatricals and gambling. We retired to our room sick and wearied of such scenes, having never before, in one day, witnessed so much
