TRINITY COLLEGE.

If the agricultural classes wish to regain their former prestige in directing the administration of public affairs and to understand clearly the workings of modern industrial society, no investment will bring them so good a return as that which provides the present generation of youths and young men with a more liberal education in POLITICAL SCIENCE, including political economy, history and organization of industries, statistics, administrative law, political philosophy, etc.

Trinity College is the only institution in North Carolina which has a regularly organized school of Political and Social Science with courses extending through two years. Trinity had 16 students in this school last year. For 1890-91 it offers 36 courses in political science and 25 in history, including industrial history. See pages 54 to 64 of catalogue.

Applicants admitted to all courses. Special courses in engineering, discussions of public questions; chemistry, including analysis of drinking and mineral waters, ores, soils; sanitation, botany, zoology, etc. Terms, tuition $25 a half year.
