Have a Competent Man to Shoe Your Horse.

Some Right Ways and Some Wrong Ways of Doing This Important Job—A Bungler May Ruin a Good Horse.

Why should not the horse shoer be licensed to practice the same as a doctor? The doctor is compelled to master the intricacies of his profession before he is permitted to enter upon the practice of that which means life or death to human beings. The horse shoer must work for years as an apprentice before he is technically capable of knowing how to shoe a horse. And he must then continue his study and practice the same as the doctor in order that he may be thoroughly up-to-date in the latest methods and keep his hand in. I believe we have now reached that stage where a horse shoer should be examined by a State Board and qualified with a license to practice. Such a law has been passed in several States, and I understand there are other States about to follow.

Here are a few specimen cases of shoeing practice that are common in most shops:

bar shoe with a leather pad is sometimes necessary.

Fig. 3.—We find this foot has a broken bar on the inside. There is but one cure for this—to remove the bar as much as possible. You will see by this illustration the bar is taken out. Shoe with a bar shoe, leather pad, tar and oakum, and it will soon heal up.

Fig. 1.—We have here the shoer's most frequent and common trouble, corns. We sometimes find them on colts that have never been shod. When a horse is brought to the shoer with a corn, it is generally lame or sore from it. All the hard, horny hoof should be well pared out around the corn. That will leave the corn free and almost any kind of a shoe—with a leather pad, tar and oakum in a bad case—will relieve the corn at once.

Fig. 4.—A foot with a diseased frog, known as the thrush. Horses do not generally go lame with it, but it very often destroys the shape of the foot. All dead and diseased parts of the frog should be removed, and with warm water applications the foot may be restored to a healthy condition.

Fig. 2.—Here we see a corn in both inside and outside heels. Sometimes corns are very deep seated, but you must go to the bottom and remove the wall as much as possible from pressing on the corn and also trim the sole down well around the corn. Where there are corns in both heels and the horse is sore, a
