

THE PROGRESSIVE FARMER

CAROLINAS-VIRGINIA EDITION

A Farm and Home Weekly for North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia

Vol. XXXV. No. 48

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1920

$1 a Year; 5c a Copy

THE FARMER'S K COW

THE WORKER AND THE WORK SHOP
Raleigh's Lady Gray, Diggs Farm, Rockingham, N. C.

IS THERE a farmer reader of The Progressive Farmer who hasn't a milk cow? We hope not. If there is, let him get on his horse and start out to buy one.

Now for your neighbor. As a progressive farmer, you owe a duty to your community. There is no better way to build it up than to improve the people. A family without the use of milk and butter is not as healthy and vigorous as it should be. The boys and girls don't make as good citizens as they should. If you have a neighbor that does not own a milk cow, sell him one on such terms that he can pay for her. If you haven't an extra one, help him buy elsewhere. Lend him some money if necessary. He will make a better crop next year and his children will be healthier and stronger.

Then make the farm milk cow grow into a milking herd. The South is going to be a great dairy section. Get in the game early. There is no better way than to start small, cooperate with your neighbors in buying a purebred bull and in starting a milk route to handle milk or cream to the nearest creamery. The milk cow will help you make your community prosperous and progressive.