What is Going on in all Sections of the Country, Personal and Other wise as Culled from our Exchange.

Rev. Sam. P. Jones is about to enter the lecture field, and will deliver a lecture with the characteristic title "Get there."

Harrison has no intention at present of coming East. His first trip will be West, next down South. He won't go up till next year.

There are 600 lawyer in Pittsburg, but as 200 of them are down with the grippe, the city may be said to stagger along in an improving condition.

It is only about two years since we had the samoan war, in which our navy started the world by its able inefficiency, and now Italy has drawn universal attention to its tendency to rest beside McGinty.

"A Son of old Harry" is the title of a story which "Judge Tourgee" will soon publish in the New York Ledger. One might be justified in thinking that "the Judge" was talking about himself, but he is not. His story is about a horse.

Mr. Washington Duke has received the deed for the Louisburg College, hereafter to be known as the Mary Duke College. One of the chief pleasures which Mr. Duke's great fortune brings him is the opportunity to make others happy.

Senator Gorman, of Maryland, is quoted as saying that "what the South needs is simply capital and to be let alone." She wants capital for the greater development of her splendid resources. She wants to be "let alone" in order that capital may not be frightened away by Congress.

At Hutchinson, Kan., Mrs. Agnes R. James is a prominent candidate for the City Treasurer's place, and as she happens to know a good deal about some of the Aldermen which they would not like her to whisper to their wives, it is hardly likely that she will be voted down.

Senator Peffer, of Kansas, expects to save at least two thirds of his salary. He has been living for a number of years on $75 a month, and had very little difficulty in making ends meet, and, of course, he has learned something about economy, which will serve him well in his present purpose of taking a small fortune home with him when he retires from the public service.

Senator Edmunds is true blue, a Bourbon of the deepest and most ineradicable dye. None of your new issues for him. They amount to nothing. He is for the Republican party fighting the campaign of 1892 "on the same ground" - the Force bill and the McKinley tariff. And yet it is not many years since Senator Edmunds was rightly esteemed a man of sagacity and statesmanship.

Badly as the Democrats were handicapped by Governor Campbell's bold battle with the Democratic boodlers of Cincinnati, the results of the municipal elections are anything but encouraging to McKinley. Cincinnati, the key to the political situation in Ohio, elected a Republican Mayor by a nominal majority of about 100, being a Republican loss of $,500 on the party majority of last fall, when there was a flood-tide against the Republicans.

BURIAL OF GOVERNOR FOWLE.

Raleigh did honor on the 9th to the memory of her patriotic citizen by draping almost every building down Fayetteville street, and by noon, as the surging mass of humanity nervously moved along her sidewalks it was strikingly evident that the State had gathered to sorrow with its capital city and mourn the loss of its noble Governor. Standing near the statue of Washington, in Capitol Square, and taking a view to where the Centennial Graded School rose to arrest the eye of the spectator it was a sorrowful scene of a most imposing character, a city wrapt in the sombre garb of mourning.

At an early hour the stars and stripes floating from the Government Building were lowered to half mast as a mark of respect from a sympathizing nation. Few places of business were opened and even they closed at three o'clock in the afternoon that no one should be barred from rendering the respects due the chief officer of the State.

At 4:19 the casket was taken out the north door of the capitol and placed in the hearse. Preceded by the Governor's staff the remains were borne along the long line of military to the first Presbyterian Church on the corner of Morgan and Salisbury streets. Along side the hearse which was heavily draped walked the following highly respected colored men of the city the acting pall bearers: Sures Atkins, Andrew Haywood, Eli Stanford, Chas. Cardwell, Austin Dunstan, James Higgs, Chas. Cotton, George Fleming.

These were followed by the honorary pall bearers. Ex. Gov. Thos. J. Jarvis, Senator Matt W. Ransom, Col. Thos. S. Kenan, ex-Judge E. G. Reade, Judge A. S. Seymour, Hon. T. R. Jernigan, Judge Jas. C. McLea, C. M. Busbee, Esq., Col. A. B. Andrews, Dr. Jas. McKee and Benj. F. Park, Esq.

Few besides the family of the late Governor, the pall bearers, officers of the State, the representatives of the colleges and University, city officers of Raleigh and their municipalities, members of the Governor's staff and distinguished visitors found seats in the first Presbyterian church, where the simple and appropriate services were held. Rev. Jno. S. Watkins, D. D., conducted the services.

Dr. Watkins' first selection was Corinthians, 15th chapter after which he offered a prayer. The choir sang "Jesus, Savior of my Soul," etc. A second selection was then read from Romans, 8th chapter.

The pastor then announced that the services would be concluded at the grave, and as the remains were borne from the church, the choir sang, "Nearer my God to Thee."

At 5:05 the funeral cortege left the church. The services at the grave were short and of the simplest character. Dr. Watkins offered a fervent prayer after which the Masons and Odd Fellows each dropped sprigs of acacia in the grave with abbreviated ceremonies. Three guns were fired by the Durham Infantry after "earth to earth" fell upon the coffin lid and the sorrowing relatives had quitted what to them is now holy ground. The large procession and the concourse of people turned their faces to the city.

The oldest citizens had never before seen a funeral procession of such magnitude in Raleigh. It was an imposing yet sorrowful sight. The hearse tastily draped and horses in their mourning dress, the low rattle of sixteen muffled drums, the steady tread of near three hundred soldiers, each with mourning badge, banners and flags draped in black, buildings wrapt in their dark dress and the whole scene a scene of sorrow what could hold back the tears that forced themselves in many an eye?

From the time the cortege left the church to the time when it approached the gate at Oakwood Cemetery exactly one half hour elapsed. The procession was over a mile in length.

The Richmond Times says: The death of Governor Fowle, the distinguished Chief Executive of North Carolina, which occurred very late on Tuesday night, was an event that has caused very sincere regret among the people of Virginia, many of whom were acquainted with him personally, and to all whom he had been long known by reputation, the very conspicuous part which he had for many years played in the public affairs of the great Commonwealth over which he was presiding at the hour of his passing away, having given him a prominent position among the public men of the South.

In his death North Carolina lost a representative citizen as well as useful and faithful public officer. It is to be sincerely lamented that a career which promised so much further distinction has been so suddenly cut short. Governor Fowle had hardly attained the age when the highest forms of political success are secured. He could justly have looked forward to still higher honors, for he enjoyed the respect of the people of his State in an unusual degree, and was in the direct line of promotion. This prospect has now melted away, for he has passed beyond the limits of earthly preferment.

THE SOUTHERN PEOPLE ADVANCE AGAIN TO PLACE AND POWER. Although they were overthrown in the war, their fortunes ruined by the disastrous issue of the contest and their whole social system disrupted and permanently altered nevertheless Southern people still control the social life of the capital of the country, and their supremacy is recognized by their fellow citizens from the North in spite of the fact that in mere point of wealth the latter occupy in comparison a very much superior position.

It has been surprising to many people to witness the resurrection of the South and its triumphant advance again to power and to place; but it is a fact, worthy or not, as the case may be, of some study. If things go on as they have been for the last ten years the South by the end of another ten years will as fully be in possession of the Government, and will as completely direct its policy as in 1858; and it cannot be said that will happen because of any peculiarity of their lives, nor the habits of authority and domination which were the natural outcome of their system of slavery and of the necessity for their banding together regardless of all other questions, to protect it. Such conditions exist no longer. The South is poor and needy and her people are compelled to work as hard as any Northern laborer; but over and through all blazes that power to rule and that fitness to command which characterized them before the war, and which is rapidly being recognized and submitted to now. -Gen. Jno. Pope, U. S. Army.

Captain Power, the national organizer of what is known as the Citizen's Industrial Alliance is making arrangements for the National Convention to be held in Cincinnati, O., May 19, to organize a new political party with the Farmers Alliance as the basis. He said last night that 1,000 delegates will be representing thirty States. The convention has not the endorsement of the great Alliance bodies, but individual members are taking an interest in it.

It is gently whispered that on the train which carried the remains of Senator Hearst to California the sorrowing delegation of accompanying statesmen were so overcome by their grief that they broke all the corkscrews on board in opening the spirit which they needed to sustain their own sinking spirits. Grief is, sometimes too intense to be borne soberly.
