OXFORD, N. C.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12, 1890.

NORTH CAROLINA has never produced exactly an equal to the famous Joe Mulhatton, but she can lay claim to some tellers of marvelous newspaper fiction who approach pretty near the high-water works of that genius. The citizens of the length and breadth of the State are familiar with the wonderful Munchausen-like stories which with truth be made. Those who inhave their birth every summer in the salt-breezes of Morehead. They are not as well acquainted-but are rapidly becoming so-with the series of unparalleled sensations which are daily SOMETHING -: - IMPORTANT evolved from the fertile brains of a Charlotte quid nunc. THE DAY has referred on several occasions to this startlingly imaginative writer. The Wilmington Star of yesterday pays him its respects in this style:

North Carolina has been afflicted from time to time with a type of news gatherers who for a certain small-sized consideration telegraph the news to such papers as are willing to pay a price for it. The forte of these gentlemen seems to be in manufacturing news and in magnifying little incidents into sensational proportions. An instance of the former occured when a terrible catastrope was described by a Charlotte news builder, as having taken place in Chatham county coal mines, where forty men had been imprisoned by the caving in of the mine. He got it up in hair-lifting style, and did it pretty well, considering there wasn't any cave in nor any forty men imprisoned down there in the bowels of the earth.

THE problem to prevent great conflicts appears to be near a solution in the invention of destructive implements of warfare. The Philadelphia Record says: "Since the last great war greater progress has been made in the improvement of engines of military de struction than in any other field of invention. What with noiseless and smokeless powder, rifles that will fire smokeless powder, rifles that will fire a shot a second, magazine guns ready what I have ordered and now on the way I to pour a continous shower of bullets upon an advancing column, and field of two miles, new horrors have been given to war. It is not strange that the nations of Europe should manifest so great a reluctance to break the peace," | Risipporting

THE Alaska investment was not bad one for the United States. That distant frozen country cost only $7, 000,000, and the revenue to the Federal Treasury is expected to amount to $3,000,000 a year for the next twenty years.

THE DAY favors a system of water works for Oxford if we can get it with out imposing a too great a burden upon our tax payers. Investigations are being made by competent gentlemen of our city, and from what we can gather they are of the most favorable character. It is confidently believed the improvement can be put in and the reduction in the insurance rates will balance the expense. If this be true, the sooner Oxford has waterworks the better.

Due to Railroads.

Asheville Citizen.

We have known much of the State before there was a yard of railroad on its surface; we have known it when a forest wilderness occupied the present sites of large and prosperous towns, and when waving fields spread their ample acres on ground now covered with thriving villages. This change is absolutely and entirely due to the construction of railroads. Still greater development is to follow their exten-

An Echo of Hill's War Cry.

Wilmington Messenger.

If the Democrats go into the campaign in 1892, favoring that sort of Civil Service law that will retain in office the Radicals now in North Carolina, then we for one will not care if Democrats are beaten. We do not believe in life-tenure in office or in fixing Northern barnacles upon the North Carolina ship. Understand that. We a e a Democrat.

Where Money Does Not Rule. Salisbury Watchman.

North Carolina has abundant reason for hearty congratulation in her freedom from money power. In our State affairs no such accusation can sinuate that the money power influences and controls political preferment is either misguided or a great ignoramus.
