NOTES OF THE DAY.

THE LOCAL HAPPENINGS SERVED IN SHORT PARAGRAPHS.

The Minor Events About the City as Gathered by the Alert Reporters of The Day.

A number of negroes went picnicing yesterday.

Copies of the THE DAY are on sale at the Oxford Book Store.

It is said that a number of Durham belles will attend the ball here tomorrow night.

Agents for surgical instruments and patent medicines have exhibits at the Opera House.

The Granville Grays and the Horner cadets have a dress parade on the streets this afternoon at five o'clock.

Messrs. T. W. Jackson & Co. and Mr. W. W. Jones are putting up iron awning frames in front of their stores on Commercial Avenue.

The Board of Medical Examiners are comfortably quartered at the Irwin Place. The applicants for license to practise medicine are numerous.

The warm, gentle, steady rain of yesterday suited the farmers from the ground up, and they stuck tobacco plants for all they were worth. A finer season for the purpose was never seen.

Capt. R. V. Minor is busy getting up a company of Confederate veterans to go to Richmond to participate in the ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the statue to Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Oxford Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 105, held a special meeting last night relative to the proposed new temple. At regular meeting tonight it is expected that final arrangements will be made to put up the building at once.

It is the dull season in Oxford. Let every good citizen turn out, enliven the streets and enliven the doctors with cheerful intercourse and conversation. Commingle with them. Do not regard them as strangers, but as your guests.

The majority of the purchasers of stock in the Oxford Land, Improvement and Manufacturing Company are business men of prominence. They regard the investment as one which will yield them big returns and first-class in every respect.

The Presbyterians have about completed arrangements and will soon begin the erection of a handsome house of worship. The Episcopalians will not be long in following their example, and Methodists and Baptists fall into line before another year passes away.

Capt. John A. Williams, the head agent for that wonderful mineral water, says truly: "It is impossible to get stronger proof of any fact than I have of the efficacy of Panacea Water." An interesting advertisement of the Panacea Water appears in this issue of THE DAY.

The Durham Globe gets off this piece of witticism at the expense of our guests: "It is probable that the towns throughout the State will show a lower mortality report for this week than any other week in the year, since all the doctors have left their homes and gone to Oxford."

The Oxford Land, Improvement and Manufacturing Company are getting in heavy orders for stock by every mail. They have already sold between thirty and forty thousand dollars worth, and the buyers are from every portion of this State, and from the North and West.

A reporter of THE DAY paid a brief visit to the factory of the Oxford Tobacco Co. yesterday afternoon. This new concern has just started off, and is putting up a superior article of smoking tobacco. The "Ox-Ford" brand will become known to fame and the proprietors attain an intimate acquaintance with fortune if merit counts for anything.

PURELY PERSONAL.

The Doings and Whereabouts of Some People You Know.

Mr. J. W. Markham came over from Durham yesterday.

Mr. D. W. Browder, of the State Chronicle, is in the city.

Mr. C. F. Kingsbury left this morning for a visit to Chase City, Va.

Miss Bertie Davis, of Stovall, is in city visiting Mrs. R. O. Gregory.

Gov. Fowle passed through on the train this morning on his way to Richmond, Va.

Mr. Pat Smith and daughter, Mrs. W. S. Overbey, went to Richmond this morning.

Misses Mary and Annie Fowler, neices of Mrs. J. A. Stradley, left this morning for their homes at Wake Forest.

Messrs. B. S. Royster and J. B. Booth took their departure yesterday afternoon for trips in the interest of the Oxford Land, Improvement and Manufacturing Co.

Mr. Jack Smith, of Halifax county, Va., the contractor for Messrs. Davis & Gregory's new warehouse, is in the city, and expects to lay the first brick on the building next week.

Mr. Jno. D. Broadford, of Atlanta, Ga., special agent of the Fire Association of Philadelphia, was in the city yesterday, and established an agency here with Messrs. J. R. Roller & Sons.

Mr. S. Y. Tupper, special agent of the Phenix Fire Insurance Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., was in Oxford yesterday inspecting his risks in our city. He was well pleased. He considers Oxford one of the coming towns of the South.

How is It!

The unveiling of the statue of Gen. Robt. E. Lee will take place in Richmond on Thursday, May 29th, amid the greatest military pageant witnessed in the South since the days of 1868. Thousands of troops from Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina and other States will take part. Our own State will be represented by twelve or fifteen companies of the State Guard. So far we have not heard that the Granville Grays, one of the crack companies of the State, will be present.

Are they going?

Granville furnished many of the bravest and best of those who followed Lee; and it is but meet that she should be represented on this occasion, for in honoring him we also honor the cause he defended and our own brave boys who yielded up their lives under his command.

By all means let the boys go. Let us make it a county matter and each contribute to the expense, which will be small, and let our merchants excuse the clerks for two day, so that our company may go with full ranks and reflect honor on themselves and their county.

The Ball Tomorrow Night.

The young gentlemen of Oxford will give a ball complimentary to the North Carolina Medical Society at Centre Warehouse tomorrow night. The programme has twelve numbers of square and round dances, and will conclude with a german.

Thorough preparations are being made under competent management, and the occasion promises to be a brilliant and notable one. Besides our own host of charming young ladies, a number of beauties from the neighboring cities are expected to be present.

Dancing will begin promptly at nine o'clock. A Raleigh orchestra will furnish the music.

MEDICAL SOCIETY.

THE 37TH ANNUAL SESSION OPENED HERE THIS MORNING.

Address of Welcome by Hon. A. H. A. Williams--Response by Dr. J. A. Hodges--Other Proceedings.

At 11:45 o'clock this morning the North Carolina Medical Society, assembled in the Opera House in this city, was called to order by Dr. J. M. Hays, local chairman of arrangements.

A prayer was offered by Rev. W. L. Cuninggim, pastor of the Methodist Church.

Hon. A. H. A. Williams then advanced to the front of the stage, and delivered a most admirable address of welcome to the Society on behalf of the citizens of Oxford. He said the welcome we offer was deep enough and hearty enough to receive the whole Society, and he referred to the pride and pleasure our people felt in inter-taining this organization composed of representative and the brainiest men in the State. From time immemorial the medical profession has been the noblest of all professions—noted for its charity and heroism. He alluded to the fact that many of our people were compelled to leave the State for treatment of certain diseases, and he believed that much could be done by the Society to relieve this state of affairs. Hospitals and asylums should be established at home where this class of patients could be cared for.

Capt. Williams spoke briefly and eloquently, and was interrupted frequently by outbursts of applause. Reference has been made to a few points he brought out, but nothing short of a full report would do justice to the orator. In closing, he said as the Society was a growing one it was proper that this meeting should be held in the embryo city of Oxford, which also was growing and like the Society was destined for a great future.

Dr. J. A. Hodges, of Fayetteville, responded for the visitors, and his fervid oratory will live in the memory of his hearers. The Oxford people, whose good fortune it was to hear him, agree that they never listened to a finer speech. During the progress of its delivery they applauded almost wildly, and at its conclusion every mouth sang his praise. He thanked Capt. Williams for the welcome which he gave the Society, but said that it had been already expressed by the kind reception which they had met with upon their arrival. Nowhere had the Society received a heartier welcome. He spoke of our city, its past, present and future, and called by name our heroes of the Revolution and of the late war. For years Oxford has been noted for its culture, of which the whole State was proud. He paid a splendid tribute to the noble deeds and sacrifices of Mrs. S. A. Elliott, who was still as untiring as ever in charitable work. Dr. Hodges language was chaste and ornate and he won his audience from the very start.

President G. C. Thomas took the chair, and the roll was called, over ninety members responding.

Routine business was then transacted for a half hour, after which the morning session was adjourned.

Dr. W. A. Hammond, of Washington, D. C., is here, and will read a paper before the Medical Society this evening.

THE O. L. I. & M. C.

Handsome Clock Given Away.

The popular jeweler, Mr. F. N. Day, offers a handsome, eighteen dollar clock to the person who guesses nearest the hours, minutes and seconds required to burn out an ordinary candle. The candle will be lighted at his store at eight o'clock, A. M., August 1st. Only one guess is allowed a person. Cards with blank spaces to be filed out, can be had by applying to Mr Day.

Selma was the scene of a horrible tragedy Saturday night. John E. Starling, who was last February tried for the murder of his mother-in-law and her eight year old grandson, was taken from his house, strapped to a tree and shot to death.

Hon. J. G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, ex-Speaker, appeared on the floor of the Senate yesterday morning and was sworn in immediately after the reading of the journal.
