PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

THE DAY reappears, as the people of Oxford say they want it and cannot well do without it. As will be noticed at the head of this column I am publisher of the paper, and H. W. Kronheimer will have entire control of the editorial department.

It is necessary to reduce the size of the paper—at least during the summer months—until the patronage justifies restoring it to its former dimension. There will, however, be no curtailment of reading matter—just as much will be given as before.

The publication of THE DAY will be continued so long as it receives sufficient support to keep it afloat. We do not expect to make a fortune out of it—we cannot run it if it does not pay expenses. We are anxious to make it a success and a means of building up Oxford, and we will do our best in this direction if our hands are upheld.

JOHN T. BRITT.

DAY AGAIN.

Night, so far as this paper is concerned, lasted a little over three weeks, and behold THE DAY again!

Although a column-to-the-page smaller and under a different publisher, it is the same old DAY. It will be conducted the same as in the past—giving the local news that is printable in the strictest sense and excluding everything unfit to be read aloud in the family circle; doing its level best for the progress of Oxford, and preaching Democracy as the ark of political safety for the Southern whites.

What more can I say, except that it gives me pleasure to be back at my old post and that I am thankful for the many evidences of appreciation of my work.

H. W. KRONHEIMER.

Marion Butler, president of the State Alliance, expresses himself as being pleased with the nomination of Elias Carr for governor, and says he will lead the ticket to victory. So far as the State is concerned the Democracy is safe enough. The third party will take a hand in national politics and promise to make trouble. The Republicans are encouraging these hotheads.

The Winston Sentinel says that there is an understanding between some of the newspaper men that Raleigh is not to get the next State Democratic convention, as it cannot furnish a hall large enough for such a meeting and has not sufficient hotel accommodations for the delegates.

Ex-Representative Eppa Hunton has been appointed by Gov. McKinney to the place in the Senate made vacant by the death of Senator Barbour. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was mentioned for the office, and will probably get it when the legislature assembles.

Our schools are doing themselves proud, and Oxford is proud of her schools.

Sen. Carlisle Couldn't Come.

Senator J. G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, was unable to be at Chapel Hill Wednesday, to the great disappointment of his many North Carolina admirers. He was widely advertised to deliver an address before the graduating class. The following letter was received from him by President Winston, of the University:

DEAR SIR:—I have been quite ill for several days, but hoped to be out this morning. My physicians, however, advised me last evening that I must not venture out to attend to business for at least a week or ten days yet. This compels me to abandon a trip to Kentucky to attend to an important law case which was to be before the University meeting in North Carolina. My purpose was to go from Kentucky to North Carolina, but I will have to give up both visits.

I send this to you at the earliest moment after receiving the doctor's advice, in order that you may secure some one in my place.

Yours truly,

J. G. CARLISLE.

Horner School had arranged for an excursion train to Chapel Hill today, but gave it up on learning Sen. Carlisle would not be there.
