Farmers, Carefully Consider.
 Mr. Tobacco Farmer, of Granville County, by your vote in the Senatorial primary November 5th, you are to decide a matter of the most vital importance to the welfare of yourself and your children. That question is: "Are you in favor of free trade in leaf tobacco?"

At present there is a duty of 89 percent on leaf tobacco brought into this country from abroad. There is no doubt about the position of Senator Simmons on the question of free trade in leaf tobacco. He is unalterably opposed to letting foreign tobacco come into competition with your leaf tobacco. Time after time during the past month Governor Kitchin has been asked his position on this question, and up to now he has been as silent as the grave on it. Can any tobacco farmer afford to vote for Kitchin under such circumstances?

The import duty on leaf tobacco helps the Granville county farmer and no man can deny it. If leaf tobacco is permitted to come into the United States free of duty, then the Trust can buy that tobacco in competition with yours. Prices of leaf tobacco are higher now, but let our domestic markets be flooded with tobacco from abroad and the price must go down.

Senator Simmons is opposed to a protective tariff but he is as strongly opposed to free trade. In a speech delivered in Pennsylvania October 11, Woodrow Wilson said that the Democratic party was not a free trade party; that no Democrat of standing advocated free trade. That is Simmons' position exactly.

While Kitchin refuses to state his position on the question of free trade in leaf tobacco, his attack upon Simmons give an answer to the question. Simmons voted against Taft's reciprocity bill because that bill let in cattle, sheep, hogs, corn, wheat and all kinds of raw material free while it retained a duty on beef, mutton, pork, flour, meal and the manufactured products. The bill was in strict accordance with Republican principles—to place a duty on goods that would protect the manufacturer while removing the protection from the farmers' products and giving raw material free to manufacturer, thus enabling the manufacturer to exact a higher price for his goods than he otherwise could. Kitchin attacks Simmons for those votes of his and by so doing impliedly says that he would have voted differently. Carrying the argument to its logical conclusion it means that should Gov. Kitchin get to the Senate he'll vote to remove the duty from leaf tobacco and keep it on manufactured tobacco, thus giving the Trust a chance to buy foreign tobacco in competition with that made by the Granville county farmer and still retain the protection given it on its manufactured product. And judging from the friendliness of the American Tobacco Company and those close to Kitchin, that's exactly what Kitchin would do.

Mr. Granville County Tobacco Farmer, can you vote for Kitchin?
